—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S talk on the radio last night shows that science has become a most important part of government.

Ancient Greece thought a nation could not retain its liberty if it grew too big for all citizens to meet in the public square, listen to their public men, and judge of their actions.

Now when President Roosevelt decides to report on "The State of the Nation," and on his plans, every one of the 123,000,000 Americans may hear him. This means power to sweep aside misrepresentation and misunderstanding. It means everything for efficient honest government.

Kidnaping, murder, sudden death are numerous, as usual, in the news of this great republic. A rich oil operator is kidnaped. He, a friend and their wives were playing bridge when the two men were taken away by bandits. One was set free later. He said the kidnapers "acted like perfect gentlemen." They only wanted the money.

In Chicago a gunman, 21 years old, killed a policeman as he stood in court. Another policeman shot him, probably fatally. The murderer and another prisoner had tried to shoot their way to freedom.

At a golf club dinner dance outside of Chicago five gunmen, with handkerchiefs covering their faces, compelled 80 men and women to lie down on the floor, to be robbed of money and jewelry. One who objected was knocked unconscious with the butt end of a sawedoff shotgun, and later beaten in the face.

All telephone wires had been cut. What about a device that would automatically inform telephone central and subsequently the police of any illegal cutting of wires?

In streets, in courtrooms, or in prison, murder goes on. Anthony Napoli, 28-year-old convict in Sing Sing, was stabbed and clubbed to death by other convicts on Saturday night. And each city has its tale of banditry, murder, kidnaping. It is a crime tidal-wave.

A French newspaper makes an unpleasant suggestion concerning the two Lithuanian fliers found dead, after their plane crashed in a thick forest in Prussia, close to the Polish border. It is alleged that German authorities had planted machine guns "at hundred meter intervals along the Polish border, with orders to shoot down any Polish army plane crossing to the German side of the border," and it hinted that the Lithuanians, flying at night, were mistaken for Polish military fliers and shot down.

It is not necessary, however, to take too seriously what a French newspaper says about Germans or what a German newspaper says about Frenchmen.

In Greenland, Eskimos come trekking great distances to see Colonel Lindbergh and his wife, who are making air maps of a northern route to Europe. The Eskimos, with their wives, sit by the hour and gaze at the plane after it has come to earth, then go back to tell about it, and are not believed.

It is probably compared in size with a wild goose, biggest bird in Greenland, and roaring with the noise that a goose makes.

That the plane is a living being, carrying human beings around, the Eskimos probably do not doubt.

Learned geological gentlemen in Washington hear that the human race started in Africa, not in Central Asia somewhere near the Gobi desert or Thibet, as supposed.

First the clumsy neanderthal man came from Africa to Europe, then the more cunning modern type came and drove out the neanderthal.

The latter would have pleased the prize fight promoters, for in his caves scientists find clubs and implements that even the Italian heavyweight, Carnera, could not handle.

On the other hand, Gregory Mason, archaeologist of the University of Pennsylvania Museum, thinks he can prove that man first developed on this American continent.

There have been seen in Spanish Honduras strange apes of anthropoid types, and in Wyoming there has been found an animal called "Tarsius," half ape, half tree shrew. These creatures might have started the human race on its way.

It doesn't matter much where men started, what counts is what they did after they started. On the whole it seems not to have been much to their credit. No other animal has been as cruel.

The tree shrew, by the way, seems to be a most adaptable animal. You could hold it easily in your hand yet it is said to be the ancestor of the right whale, 80 feet long.

Weather conditions—a drizzling rain and low "ceiling"—forced Gen. Italo Balbo and the 24 ships of the Italian armada to skip Boston today, disappointing thousands, and crossing Massachusetts Bay to the eastward, on their journey home from American triumphs.

They were flying at only 500 feet and at high speed. Air experts said Gen. Balbo, with his fleet unable fly higher than that, deemed it unwise to risk a swing over Boston's buildings.

SHE GOES TO FACE M'MAHON

MRS. CRAIG MRS. COSTELLO

Jessie Costello walked firmly, unafraid, but unsmiling, as she left today to meet the greatest ordeal she has encountered since her trial for life began. She went to court determined to "out-face" Eddie McMahon, the "kiss-and-tell" wooer, who is the State's star witness. (Boston American photo.)

Salem Courthouse, July 25—On the day following her husband's death by cyanide, Jessie Costello sent an envelope of money and a policeman's complete uniform, with gun and holster, to Edward J. McMahon, the kiss-and-tell policeman who subsequently confessed a love affair with her, it was testified at her trial for her husband's murder today.

Fred Sherry, Peabody fireman and intimate friend of Capt. William J. Costello, testified to delivering them to McMahon on orders of the widow following a visit to a bank.

He said she took the uniform from her own home, but that she did not give him the money until he had driven her to the bank.

Said She Wouldn't Be 'Buried With Bum'

Jessie told him, he said, that there was $378 or $398 in the envelope.

Dist. Atty. Hugh A. Cregg, in his opening, had said he would show McMahon had entrusted police relief association funds to Jessie and that he was pressing her for them.

Funds Gone, Society Woman Dies By Gas

Marblehead, July 25—Mrs. Grace E. Dayton, 46, president of the Marblehead Women's Republican Club and prominent in social circles on the North Shore, was found dead today, a suicide by gas.

Police said they had been informed that she had worried over financial matters, that family investments had proved a loss and all the servants had left.

Mrs. Dayton's body was found by her husband, W. Hardy Dayton, a retired business man, in the kitchen of their home on Clifton ave.

Gas was streaming from all burners in a range.

Windows and doors were closed. Two doctors worked in vain to revive her.

The husband found her body on coming downstairs for breakfast, which she was to have prepared.

Mrs. Dayton, a graduate of Brimmer College, was also head of the Marblehead Art Association and the Women's club.

STOCKS HIGHER; GRAIN RALLIES

New York, July 25 (AP)—Stocks were higher today. Many opening advances of $1 to $4 were reduced by profit-taking sales, but the market later rose again.

As it reached the half-way point of its abbreviated trading period grain prices at Chicago and Winnipeg had rallied and offerings of shares were being well absorbed.

Rail stocks, favored by the substantial increase in June earnings as well as good loadings reports, strengthened. Many leading industrials moved narrowly, even at the outset, although numerous specialties, such as the "repeal" issues, showed higher prices.

Bar Silver Shipments Paying British Debt

San Francisco, July 25 (INS)—A shipment of 20,000,000 ounces of silver was en route to San Francisco today from Bombay, India.

Although silver is less than 50 cents an ounce on the open market, the shipment will be accepted by the United States government as a $10,000,000 payment on Great Britain's war debt under terms recently offered by President Roosevelt. The shipment will be deposited in the mint here.

Flood of Jobs Pledges Swamps Roosevelt

Washington, July 25—President Roosevelt was represented at the White House today as exceedingly encouraged by the immediate response to his summons for employers to raise wages and shorten working horus.

By noon today more than 5000 pledges of support for his course were stacked on desks in the Executive offices. Others arrived at the Industrial Recovery Administration, where Hugh S. Johnson and his aides sped work on proposed wage-work agreements for many specific industries.

All the communications were to be compiled for the "honor rolls" of those enlisting in the campaign. These lists, as the President disclosed last night, are to be posted in postoffices for public scrutiny.

The appeal of the President was terse:

"I ask that even before the dates set in the agreements which we have sent out, the employers of the country who have not already done so—the big fellows and the little fellows—shall at once write or telegraph to me personally at the White House, expressing their intention of going through with the plan."

Meeting with his "Recovery Council," Mr. Roosevelt called for a full report of progress of the recovery campaign during the last week. Among the thousands of messages reaching the White House was one from Gov. Ritchie, of Maryland, who said:

"You can count on the employers and workers of Maryland to cooperate with you to the limit in your drive to end the depression.

Striking Emblem "Badge of Honor"

Washington, July 25 (AP)—The American red, white and blue is the coloring of the "badge of honor" which employers co-operating in the national recovery movement will display in their windows and on their goods.

650 Shoe Workers in Lynn Walkout

Lynn, July 25 (AP)—Over 650 workers in two women's novelty shoe companies walked out today in protest against an alleged lockout of cutters.

Max Sugarman an official of Mayflower Shoe Co., denied his concern had locked out the cutters and said they had merely been laid off temporarily because of slack business. The other concern affected was the Federal Shoe Co.

AIRMADA LEADER AND MEN WITH THE ITALIAN AMBASSADOR

NATION BACKS ROOSEVELT IN ECONOMIC WARFARE

Washington, July 25 (INS)—America's dusty and creaking wheels of industry labored into action today following President Roosevelt's radio call to economic arms heard last night by anxious millions.

Delivering the most momentous address since his inauguration, the President held out a promise of lasting prosperity, but bluntly told the American people he could deliver the goods only with their help.

His speech came at a time when the giant wheels of his national recovery machine were just beginning to turn. It was a supreme effort to accelerate their motion.

Mr. Roosevelt spoke over a nation-wide radio hookup, and directed his words particularly to the conference of governors gathered in San Francisco.

"UP TO THE PEOPLE"

Clearly, the executive explained, all that is possible to start the country moving toward better times has been done. He reviewed the work to that end accomplished to date since March 4, and found it good. From now on, said Mr. Roosevelt, it is up to the American people.

The President made it bluntly clear that he does not consider his recovery program a "cure-all" and does not believe in panaceas. He took pains to point out that it was based on the oldest of principles—that on which this government was founded—that all working together can accomplish what one cannot do.

Confidence that agriculture and industry would fall in line was clearly expressed.

WARNS OF SHIRKERS

At the same time, the President did not minimize the dangers which might accrue should any group shirk its job.

He pictured the past four years as "economic hell," and warned that failure to co-operate in the effort to restore commodity prices, provide a living wage for the employed, reduce unemployment and at the same time provide a fair investment for capital, would mean a return to such conditions.

In its essence, however, the address of the President was one of intense optimism.

"We have built a granite foundation for a period of confusion," he said. "I cannot guarantee the success of this nation-wide plan, but the people of this country can guarantee its success."

The major note struck in the speech embraced a fervent and often repeated appeal to industry to enter the general covenant for maximum work hours and minimum wages.

FARM PRODUCTON CURB

Mr. Roosevelt outlined the ends he hopes to achieve through the great agricultural and industrial legislation enacted in the special session of Congress.

"First, the farm act: It is based on the fact that the purchasing power of nearly half our population depends on adequate prices for products. We have been producing more of some crops than we consume or can sell in a depressed world market."

"This brings me to the final step—bringing back industry along sound lines.

"Last autumn, on several occasions, I expressed my faith that we can make possible by democratic self-discipline in industry general increases in wages and shortening of hours sufficient to enable industry to pay its own workers enough to let those workers buy and use the things that their labor produces.

"But if any considerable group should ing or shirk, this great opportunity will pass us by and we will go into another desperate winter. This must not happen."

Ickes Too Busy to Go With Roosevelt

Washington, July 25 (AP)—Busy Secretary Ickes, public works administrator, works 15 hours a day administering the plan designated to put millions of men on 30-hour-week jobs.

Ickes leaves out lunch entirely. He keeps his home address a secret. But he is home little, working often from 8 a. m. until 11 at night.

President Roosevelt recently invited Ickes to spend a week-end with him on a cruise down the Potomac. Disregarding the rule that a White House invitation is a command, the cabinet officer replied:

"I'm too busy. I can't go for the week-end, but I'll fly down Sunday."

Rayon Mills Code in Line With Textiles

Washington, July 25 (AP)—Hearings opened today before industrial recovery officials on a proposed fair practice code for the rayon industry, with provisions virtually identical to those of the cotton textile agreement under which they already are operating.

The rayon code provides for a 40-hour maximum week and minimum wages of $12 a week in the south and $13 in the north, bans employment of persons under 16 years of age, and provides for submission by January 1 of a wage-hour schedule for outside crews and cleaners.

NATIONS SEEK LIQUOR TRADE

Washington, July 25 (AP)—Foreign powers already are clamoring to get favorable treatment for their wines, whiskies and beers in event the Eighteenth Amendment is repealed.

France and half a dozen other nations have sounded out American officials in London and Washington on the possibilities of tariff trades on alcoholic beverages.

The lineup of Tennessee, Arkansas and Alabama for prohibition repeal, many diplomats say, has persuaded them the American market will be opened to liquor imports by the end of this year.

27 Lose Fight to Save Drowned Man

Smithfield, R. I., July 25—Twenty-seven persons worked unsuccessfully two hours here in an attempt to revive Emile Bayle, 33, of Providence, whose body was taken from Waterman's reservoir five minutes after swimmers noticed he failed to come up after a dive.

Three physicians, three rescue crews, a nurse and state police worked over Bayle's body before he was pronounced dead.

Beer Forcing Speakeasies to Shut Up Altogether

New York, July 25 (INS)—The speakeasy today is near the end of its rope and the night club has already almost passed out of the picture, in the opinion of Edward P. Mulrooney, chairman of the State Alcoholic Beverage Control Board.

"I hear the speakeasies around town are having a tough time," Mulrooney said. "Their customers want beer and there is not nearly as much profit in that as there is in gin and whiskey.

"Night clubs are definitely out of the picture. One of the largest night clubs in Harlem is closed and I heard that another there is operating $20,000 in the red.

"Even the Negroes are giving up gin for honest beer. Less gin and more beer is a real victory for law and order."

Mulloney Appears Before Federal Probe Jury

There was a stir in the Federal building today as Daniel C. Mulloney, president of the closed Federal National Bank, appeared before the grand jury that started to investigate the affairs of the closed institution. He came in response to a secret summons.

Mulloney's appearance gave credence to the report that other prominent bankers will appear before the grand jury or the Department of Justice agents, who are conducting an investigation, under the direction of Special Asst. Atty. Gen. Irving G. McCann.

It is known that the investigators are eager to see reports concerning certain of the closed bank's affiliates, but according to rumors, a number of bankers have refused to produce such records unless compelled to do so by a court.

McCANN TESTIFIES

Mulloney was followed into the grand jury room by McCann, who was accompanied by a stenographer and an assistant bearing a great sheaf of documents.

Meanwhile, it became known that although the present grand jury will soon adjourn, it is to be reconvened in August, ostensibly to continue its investigation of banking matters.

The concurrent Department of Justice probe is rapidly being pushed to completion, two additional investigators arriving from Washington today to aid in the work.

MILLIONS IN ASSETS

Two other investigators have been assigned to look over the books of the closed Inman Trust Co., of Cambridge, also being investigated by the Middlesex County grand jury, and the affairs of the State National Bank of Lynn and the Middlesex National Bank of Lowell, closed affiliates of the Federal National.

The Justice Department agents, aided by Herbert Pearson, receiver, are working night and day to complete their work. The hope to submit a report before the end of August, it was said.

The Federal National and its three major affiliates had assets of more than $40,000,000 when closed by the comptroller of currency on December 15, 1931.

Other affiliates, being investigated by State Banking Commissioner Arthur Guy, are said to have assets of $15,000,000.

THOMPSON FOR MILK POOLS

Washington, July 25 (AP)—George H. Thompson, counsel for Bellows Falls Co-operative Creamery, urged adoption of his marketing agreement as one providing a low processing tax today before the agricultural adjustment administration hearing on the Boston milk situation.

Representatives of the New England Milk Producers' Association, when asked about reports that the association had acquired or was contemplating acquisition of milk companies in Vermont, refused to make any statement, saying it would be premature to do so.

Thompson's plan would permit the retention of present milk prices in the Boston area and set up the present New England Governors' Dairy Advisory Board to administer the marketing agreement.

Questioned by Francis Goertner, counsel for the adjustment administration, he said if a general pool, such as proposed by the consolidated dairies, were set up "we must be treated as a producer, we are a farmer, a corporate farmer." He said he understood the United Farmers' Co-operative of Morrisville, Vermont, and the Milton, Massachusetts, Co-operative favored his plan.

2-WAY COUPLE IN FIGHT ON DIVORCE

A Medford [illegible] wife who still continues [illegible] under the same roof [illegible] but in a halved house, took up legal cudgels in Suffolk divorce court today, each seeking a divorce on the grounds of cruel and abusive treatment.

They are Dr. George Lynde Gates, East Boston and Winthrop physician, and an aviation enthusiast, and Mrs. Mary Gately, who was Miss Mary E. Gorman before her marriage on April 19, 1920.

Their divorce actions were taken up today by Judge William M. Prest in Probate Court, with 16 witnesses sworn for both sides. Each seeks custody of the 13-year-old daughter, Barabara, whose custody was given to the father in 1928 when he sued for the legal right to live apart from his wife.

The couple, despite their differences, live in the house at 204 Faxline st., Winthrop, the husband in one part and the wife in another.

Jail Hundreds to Block Spanish Revolt

Madrid, July 25 (AP)—Arrests of more than 500 persons in Madrid, Barcelona, Seville and other cities and the closing of many radical centers gressured government leaders today that a revolutionary plot had been thwarted.

DOG RACE BETS GET TEST ON OPTIONS

BULLETIN

Officials of the New England Greyhound Racing Association, with their counsel, Harold W. Sullivan of the Barry office, conferred today with Atty. Gen. Joseph E. Warner and state police officials at the State House on the matter of bringing a test case into course to decide the legality of option hying on the Lawrence dog track greyhound racers.

Possibility that option windows would be re-opened tonight at the Lawrence dog track loomed today as officials of the New England Greyhound Association and Edward J. O'Brien, track manager, conferred with their attorney in Boston.

The dog racing officials left it up to the [illegible] former Lieut.-Gov. [illegible] Barry, as to whether [illegible] would re-open the option [illegible] be prepared [illegible] summonses in a [illegible] tend that the [illegible] and they intend welcome a [illegible]

Boston Man Fined on Revolver Charge

Providence, July 25—George E. Valli, 31, of Andrew rd., Boston, was fined $200 and costs by Judge Herbert Carpenter in superior court here after pleading nolo to a charge of carrying a concealed weapon.

A loaded 32-caliber revolver was found in Valli's car when it was stopped for speeding and searched February 9.

Priest to Be Buried From Medway Home

Funeral services for the Rev. James H. McGinnes of Medway will be held tomorrow at St. Joseph's church in that town with a solemn high mass of requiem at 10 o'clock.

Fr. McGinnis was a native of Medway and pastor of St. Mary's church at Poughkeepsie, N. Y., until his last illness.

"Get-Rich-Quick" Lottery Tricks Thousands

People with the "get-rich-quick" instinct in Boston and nearby cities have poured $10,000 into the hands of the promoters of a "fake" lottery, known as the Old Dominion, police revealed today.

Inspector Benjamin Goodman of the headquarters bureau of criminal investigation was assigned to find the promoters or any of the agents.

A preliminary checkup with Police Chief Ferdinand Dufresne of Montreal proved the lottery was a "fake," Goodman said.

Many complaints have been received by Boston police and Federal authorities from purchasers of tickets who had grown suspicious, although the "drawing day" does not come until Saturday.

The tickets purport to be printed in Canada and bear the British flag and Canadian insignia. The first prize is stated to be $35,000. At least 5000 tickets, at 50 cents each, have been sold in Boston alone.

Boston police believe the printing plant where the tickets were produced is somewhere in this section. Montreal authorities could not locate the headquarters of the lottery, although an address in that city is given on the circulars.

Police learned that an energetic drive to dispose of several thousand more tickets before Thursday, which is "closing day," is being made in Greater Boston and the mill cities.

Dies in Hawaii

GRAIN DEALERS HEED WARNING

Washington, July 25 (INR)—With the threat of rigid federal regulation hanging over their heads, leaders of the nation's grain exchanges today started a four-sided attack against speculative manipulation of farm commodity prices.

At a conference attended by George N. Peek, farm act administrator, the grain exchange officials decided to eliminate permanently all "trading privileges," including weekly indemnities.

Progress was made toward adoption of more stringent exchange requirements in three other directions. These included:

1—1 permanent limit on daily price fluctuations in wheat, rye, barley, corn and other grains.

2—A sharp reduction in the size of commitments allowed in futures trading.

3—T marked increase in marginal requirements.

Today's meeting was devoted mainly to discussion of new exchange requirements that could be put into effect immediately.

EARTH GROWING GRANITE SKIN

Washington, July 25 (AP)—Like an egg building its own shell, the earth is making itself a granite "skin."

And that, the International Geological Congress was told today, helps solve the age-old qestion of whence came the continents. They are part of this granite shell, which hasn't yet stretched all the way around, but which has been in process of building for perhaps a billion years.

How the earth has been doing its shell-building was explained by W. H. Collins, director of the geological survey of Canada. It's exactly like the famous prison pastime of making little rocks on of big ones, but with the tremendous heat and pressre inside the earth serving instead of sledgehammers as the motive power.

MUCK RESIGNS AT HAMBURG

Hamburg, Germany, July 25 (INS)—Karl Muck, former conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, today resigned his leadership of the Hamburg Philharmonic Orchestra.

Muck, for whom the Senate announced it would prepare special honors, tendered his resignation because of differences resulting from the amalgamation of the Philharmonic, State, and Theater orchestras.

MURDER CHARGE AGAINST TWO IN TONG WAR

The unwritten code of the Chinese tongs was set aside today as four Chinese gave testimony in Municipal Court which resulted in issuances of murder warrants against two men, in the slaying of Dong Hong Foe last February.

The names of the four witnesses were kept secret. Those charged with the murder are Wah Tom Leong and Wong Kan Ark, both of Harrison ave.

Two of the witnesses said they saw these fire guns. The other witnesses said they saw the pair running.

Sergt. Dunleavy told Judge Dowd his investigation showed that the building on Harrison ave. where the shooting occurred was given over to opium smoking. He named Wong Kan Ark, alias Ed Wong, as the man who rented it.

He said Dong Hong Foo, otherwise known as Freddie Dong, went there to smoke and when he started to leave, an argument broke out.

Oklahoma Dentist Kills Self in France

Nice, France, July 25 (AP)—Dr. Perry R. Chance, 62-year-old dentist born in Oklahoma, but a naturalized French citizen, was found dead with a bullet wound in his heart at his country villa near Nice on Monday, police announced today in reporting the death a suicide.

Fate Rests With Nation, Roosevelt

"All of the proposals and all of the legislation since the fourth day of March have not been just a collection of haphazard schemes but rather the orderly component parts of a connected and logical whole."

* * *

"For years the government has not lived within its income. The immediate task was to bring our regular expenses within our revenues. That has been done."

* * *

"We are using the utmost care to choose labor-creating, quick acting, useful (public work) projects, avoiding the smell of the pork barrel."

* * *

"For many years the two great barriers to a normal prosperity have been low farm prices and the creeping paralysis of unemployment."

* * *

"In the cotton textile code and in other agreements already signed, child labor has been abolished. That makes me personally happier than any other one thing with which I have been connected since I came to Washington."

* * *

"This monstrous thing (child labor), which neither opinion nor law could reach through years of effort, went out in a flash."

* * *

"We are not going through another winter like the last. I doubt if ever any people so bravely and cheerfully endured a season half so bitter."

* * *

"If all employers will act together to shorten hours and raise wages we can put people back to work. No employer will suffer."

* * *

"The blanket agreement which I am sending to every employer, will start the wheels turning now, and not six months from now."

* * *

"In war, in the gloom of night attack, soldiers wear a bright badge on their shoulders to be sure that comrades do not fire on comrades. That is why we have provided a badge of honor for this purpose, a simple design with a legend 'We Do Our Part.'"

* * *

"The smaller employers are indeed a vital part of the backbone of the country, and the success of our plans lies largely in their hands."

* * *

"Already the telegrams and letters are pouring into the White House—messages from employers who ask that their names be placed on this special roll of honor."

* * *

"It is my purpose to keep posted in the postoffice of every town, a roll of honor of all those who join with me."

* * *

"It will be clear to you, as it is to me, that while the shirking employer may undersell his competitor, the saving he thus makes is made at the expense of his country's welfare."

* * *

"I am asking the workers to go along with us in a spirit of understanding and of helpfulness."

Heat Halts Speech by President

Washington, July 25 (US)—Washington's terrific heat interrupted President Roosevelt's radio speech on the recovery program.

When half through the address, the President called for a glass of water, remarking to his radio audience:

"It's a hot night tonight in Washington, my friends."

Owing to the severe electrical storm in New England thousands were unable to hear the radio address, it was learned at the White House today.

LIGHTNING PARALYZES MOTHER AND SON AND KILLS COWS

HOMES, CHURCH IN TAUNTON ARE HIT BY BOLTS

Telephone and Light Service Are Shut Off in Terrific Storm

Taunton, July 25—Two persons were paralyzed by lightning, several cows were killed, the steeple of a church was shattered and many other buildings were damaged when a freak electrical storm, followed by cloudbursts, struck here early today.

At the home of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Lizak, Third ave., their son, Walter, who was asleep was tossed from his bed to the floor, leaving him stunned, with both his arms completely paralyzed. Mrs. Lizak, who was in another room, was also a victim of the bolt, both her legs being paralyzed. Windows in their home were shattered.

The steeple of the Union Congregational Church was struck, scattering wreckage over the neighborhood. The lightning also passed through the church and left the front vestibule charred.

Two cows belonging to Harry Lincoln of No. Taunton were killed in a open field. A third was killed when lighting struck the barn of Albert Morlock, Johnson street.

A bolt hit the chimney and leveled off the roof top of the home owned by Mr. and Mrs. William Palmer, an elderly couple living in No. Raynham. It passed through the kitchen, tumbling the stove covers to the floor and then cracking the stove wide open. Palmer and his wife both suffered from shock.

Telephone and electric light service were completely cut off, when trees which were uprooted by the force of the storm fell across the wires and short-circuited them.

Chicago Man Held in Kidnap Plots

Chicago, July 25 (INS)—In its determined fight to end the kidnaping racket, federal authorities held in custody Leo Mongoven, public enemy and lieutenant of George (Bugs) Moran. Mongoven is held in connection with plots to kidnap several prominent Chicagoans.

Melvin Purvis, chief of the federal bureau of investigation, was to grill Mongoven today on a series of plots that have come to light since the kidnaping of John (Jake the Barber) Factor. It is understood the government will also attempt to connect the Moran gang with the abduction of Factor.

Norfolk County Cuts Tax $72,146

A reduction of $72,146 in Norfolk County taxes over last year was announced today by County Treasurer Ralph D. Pettingell. He gave out this year's tax roll as $464,854, compared with $547,000 a year ago. The reduction is attributed to a curtailment of highway construction. It means a slash of $21,000 for Brookline, $5000 for Milton and $18,000 for Quincy.

President on Air Appeals -:- To Employers of Labor

President Roosevelt making his radio talk on the National Recovery Act. He urged the nation to unite behind the program for economic recovery and appealed to American employers "in the name of patriotism and humanity" to sign the blanket industrial code and lead the country out of the "Economic Hell" of the last four years. "If any considerable group should lag or shirk," the President said, "we will go into another desparate winter. This must not happen." (Int. News Photos.)

BABY AT PLAY FALLS 40 FEET

Her father, Michael Fallino, carried her to Massachusetts General Hospital, where she died a little after 10 a. m. of a fractured skull and internal injuries.

Reno Next Stop for Mary in Fight With Doug

Reno, Nevada, July 25 (AP)—Reports Mary Pickford planned to establish a divorce residence in Nevada were without direct confirmation today, although J. W. Dignan, of the law firm which represented here in a suit for freedom from Owen Moore in 1920, said she had been here recently.

In Hollywood, Miss Pickford whose separation from Douglas Fairbanks was announced several weeks ago, said she had no divorce plans.

"I have not been in Nevada and I give you my word of honor there is nothing to this report that I have made divorce plans," she said.

Information from a usually reliable source said the film star conferred with attorneys here two weeks ago and completed plans for a divorce residence.

Dignan parried questions with the declaration:

"You should have asked Mary all about her plans when she was here."

The attorney said he had not seen Miss Pickford. He declined to state whether she had conferred with his law partner, United States Senator P. A. McCarron, who was in Reno July 4.

Miss Pickford obtained her divorce in 1920 from Owen Moore at Minden, in the Carson Valley, south of here, where Elliott Roosevelt, son of the President, was divorced from Mrs. Elizabeth Donner Roosevelt last week.

NORTH WIND HAS HEAT ON RUN

Boston folks awakened this morning and heaved a sigh of relief. The temperature had dropped nearly 20 degrees from yesterday's record-breaking high of 98. What's more, a strata of clouds shielded the city from the sun's torrid rays and promised to do so all day.

After passing a mark of 51 years' standing yesterday, the mercury slid down to a low of 69 degrees at 7 this morning. By 9 it was a degree warmer.

It may go a bit higher before the day is over, said the weather man, but not enough to cause any discomfort. Cool, northerly winds received official credit for the change.

Yesterday's heat, which abated after night rains, was blamed for two deaths in the state. The victims were Charles Johnson, 65, of Frothingham ave., Charlestown, and Michael Caverley, 70, of North Brookfield, who collapsed and died in Worcester.

JUDGE CLOCKS FAST DRIVES

A Newton court judge, to prove that he was right in freeing fast-driving motorists, took a trip with motorcycle police to watch traffic. Then he admitted he was wrong.

Responding to complaints that he should not free motorists who were speeding by busy Newton Highlands intersections, Judge William F. Bacon, accompanied by policemen, stationed himself at one of the corners and clocked passing cars.

At Boylston and Elliott sts., cars whizzed by at 45 miles per hour. Ruefully, Judge Bacon looked toward the motorcycle men, and admitted they were right.

Accompanied by Police Chief Michael Hughes, the group went to the intersections at Boylston st. and Dudley rd., and Meredith at Circuit aves.

Again the clocking of cars. Judge Bacon soon became convinced.

From now on motorists who have occasion to pay Newton Highlands and Upper Newton Falls visits had better be on their behavior.

Auto Dealers Will Discuss Code Plan

Hartford, Ct., July 25 (INS)—Connecticut and Rhode Island automobile dealers will gather here Monday to act on a proposed automotive retailing code formulated under the national recovery act.

The proposed code would provide a 5 per cent increase in all wages or salaries and reduce working hours to 40 a week except for salesmen and executives.

AIMEE FAINTS AS SHE PRAYS FOR DAVID

Cannot Understand Why Husband Quit to Try Vaudeville

Norfolk, Va., July 25—With a prayer on her lips that God give her strength to get back into four-square gospel work at Angelus Temple, and protesting she still loved her husband, David Hutton, "more than anything in the world," Aimee Semple McPherson Hutton, blonde, colorful evangelist, collapsed on the deck of the steamship City of Havre, as the vessel pulled into Norfolk dock this morning.

Dr. W. B. Davis, ship's surgeon, was summoned to attend her. She was taken to the captain's cabin and placed in a berth.

After a few moments she was revived and was assisted to a sitting position by her daughter, Mrs. Roberta Semple Smythe, and a nurse who accompanied them from Paris where Aimee underwent an abdominal operation.

"TREMENDOUS SHOCK"

Asked about his recent action instituting divorce proceedings she said:

"Oh, I can't believe it. Of course, I still am in love with him."

Attended by the nurse, she lay on a bunk in the captain's quarters to receive newspapermen as the City of Havre pulled into port.

"It is all so hasty that I don't know what to say," she said. "His last word was that he was counting the hours until I returned. It has been a tremendous shock."

The evangelist had been abroad since January and recently underwent an operation in Paris. It was while she was on board the City of Havre that she was informed about her husband's divorce action.

Aimee declined to make any statement about what she thought of Hutton's recent abandonment of his work in the Angelus Temple in Los Angeles to go into vaudeville.

"I wouldn't like to say anything unkind," she said in response to a question.

Capt. Daley Gets Tip in Murder Case

Making his first official court appearance since his recent appointment as supervisor of court cases for the police department, Capt. James F. Daley attended the murder arraignment of John W. Freeman before Judge Murray in the municipal court today.

Freeman was held without bail, charged with having taken part in the slot-machine murder of Stephen Femmino last Thursday.

Capt. Daley announced that he was there to confer with Judges Murray, Dowd and Devlin.

"He absolutely shares my point of view—don't you, Bob?" she asked.

Dana Shows Losses to Arbitration Board; New Schedules

After a recess Dana read into the records the changes which the arbitrators are to consider. Some of these are:

Reductions in all rates included in the agreement between the Carmen's Union and the Boston Elevated.

One week's vacation with pay instead of two weeks.

Introduction of charges in working conditions of the bus operators, conductors and mormen since 1918, featured the testimny of Edward Dana, general manager of the Boston Elevated at the resumed hearing before the arbitration board in Somerset st. today.

Dana gave the revenue mileage operated the first week in July for the last 11 years. He showed where the two-man cars had been cut in mileage from 72.6 in 1923 to 12.8 in 1933; one-man cars from 26.1 in 1923 to 6.3 in 1933, and motor coaches from 1.3 in 1923 to 26.9 in 1933.

Appeal to the trustees on discipline cases to be within 15 days after action by the executive vice-president and general manager or case to be forfeited.

Rating to cease if men are laid off more than 12 months.

Men on night work trains, rapid transit lines, shall perform seven hours' platform or cover work for which they shall receive eight hours' pay.

Men in maintenance department qualified for operation of motor vehicle, or who have bid for and qualified for operation of snow equipment shall not be laid off on basis of trackmen laborers-hoisters rating in classification qualified for.

In layoff of maintenance employes, men not qualified or competent to perform the work to which they would be assigned, to be the first to be laid off.

DAVID HUTTON SUED AGAIN

Los Angeles, July 25—Accusing David L. Hutton of threatening to knock his head through a concrete wall, Noland Tucker, a musician, filed a $6000 damage action against the "Angelus Temple baritone."

Tucker charged Hutton with battery. He asserted Hutton, Hutton's father and a Temple attendant ejected him forcibly from the church July 24, 1932.

Tucker's suit said Hutton called him a "perjurer and forger" and accused him of "fraud and malfice" in obtaining a judgment against Hutton in small claims court.

OIL MAGNATE'S WIFE CHECKS KIDNAP HUNT

Oklahoma City, July 25 (AP)—Investigation of the kidnaping of Charles F. Urschel, oil millionaire, was at a standstill today as the entire family called off the forces of the law in an effort to encourage the abductors to communicate their price for Urschel's safe release.

R. H. Colvin, chief of the United States Bureau of Investigation here, ordered a 24-hour recess in the hunt, commenting:

PROMISES NO PROSECUTION

This action was taken at the earnest request of Mrs. Berenice Slick Urschel, distraught at lack of word from the kidnapers.

Through the press, she promised the captors she was not interested in their prosecution but "only in the safe return of my husband."

Before the investigation was halted, Deputy Sheriff Bill Eads and two other deputies, armed to the teeth, sped away on a secret errand connected with the kidnaping.

"We are working on some definite leads, but there's nothing we can make public yet," Eads said. "We'll have to wait until Urschel is released before we can do much more."

ONE OF GANG IDENTIFIED.

Seeligson, brother-in-law of Slick, as was Urschel before the death of his first wife, was hastening here by train from North Carolina.

Urschel and a friend, Walter E. Jarrett, were kidnaped from the Urschel home Saturday night as they were playing cards. Jarrett later was released and was reported to have identified a police photograph as that of one of the kidnapers.

HELPED FROM PLANE IN NEW YORK
from the ambulance plane at Floyd Bennett field by several New York policemen. She is also shown with her arms and legs bandaged, seated in a hospital wheel chair prior to departing for a hotel. New York's official welcome for the couple will be held as soon as they recover from injuries.

O'CONNELL FREED IN 48 HOURS

Albany, N. Y., July 25 (INS)—John J. O'Connell, Jr., 22, nephew of Edward J. and Daniel P. O'Connell, Albany county Democratic leaders, will be released by his abductors within 48 hours it was hinted today by persons close to the Democratic chiefs.

Young O'Connell was kidnaped 18 days ago from in front of his home and held for $250,000 ransom.

John J. (Solly) O'Connell, father of the missing youth, returned to Albany last night after being absent from the city for nearly a week. It was reported he had been attempting to establish contact with the kidnapers.

Reports persisted today that Young O'Connell will be released in New York City when the "deal" with his family has been completed.

Touhy Gang Under Guard on Way to Trial

Milwaukee, July 25 (INS)—Federal authorities, guarding against a possible rescue attempt, today were to convoy Roger Touhy, Chicago gang leader, and three henchmen to St. Paul for a speedy trial as the kidnapers of William Hamm, Jr., millionaire brewer.

To prevent rescue by the two score gunmen commanded by Touhy, an elaborate guard of federal deputy marshals and police was enlisted for the trip to Minnesota.

The gangsters are charged with abducting Hamm and holding him for a ransom of $100,000. Touhy's fellow prisoners are Willie Sharkey, Gus Schaeffer and Eddie McFadden. All have police records.

All will be tried under the new federal "Lindbergh law" which allows a life sentence for transporting a person across a state border for ransom purposes.

5000 More Join Hollywood Strike

Hollywood, July 25 (AP)—Motion picture studios endeavored to maintain the production of canned entertainment for American and foreign movie patrons today as 5000 more technicians struck.

Union workers who help make celluloid romances left their jobs, their spokesman said, because the studios hired non-union men to replace the 665 sound technicians who struck Saturday midnight.

The sound men's organization announced studio musicians might strike later today.

Ex-Husband of Marion Talley Weds

Berlin, July 25—A dispatch from Munich said that Michael Raucheisen, German concert pianist and former husband of Marion Talley, of Kansas City, Met opera, Opera singer, had married Marie Ivaguen, a noted singer, last Thursday in Bad Reichenhall.

The imperia of alcoholic beverages into the United States in 1913 totaled over 17,000,000 gallons with a value of $20,743,128.

Lynn Rent Squabble Ends Before Court

Jacob Baronian of Essex st., Lynn, today was charged with assault upon Mrs. Elizabeth Leyshon, 52, and her daughter, Ethel, 35, as the result of a melee attendant upon Baronian's demand for eight weeks' rent from Mrs. Leyshon.

Police said they found a divan, a phonograph and several chairs had been thrown out of a window by Baronian when they arrived on the scene.

Gallagher Heads Negro College

New Haven, July 25—The Rev. Buell G. Gallagher, of Passaic, N. J., was named president of Talladega College, Negro school at Talladega, Ala., by the Rev. Dr. Oscar E. Maurer, chairman of the board.

Gallagher, who is 32, will take office in September. The college is conducted by the American Missionary Association of the Congregational and Christian Churches.

FIVE WHITE MICE OFF TO BERLIN

The Hamburg-American liner Milwaukee today sailed from Boston for Hamburg for the second time this year, picking up 100 passengers.

Among these was Rt. Rev. George Craig Stewart, Episcopal bishop of Chicago, who recently denounced the marriage of Elliott Roosevelt to Miss Ruth Googins as contrary to church laws. Bishop Stewart remained in seclusion in his stateroom.

The only cargo picked up consisted of five white mice consigned to Dr. Klaus Zimmermann of the Kaiser Wilhelm Institute, Berlin. They were shipped by F. H. Clark of Bussey Institute, Forest Hills, in the box was sufficient food for the voyage.

Mrs. Louise Kunstmann of Neurenberg, Germany, sailed after several months' visit with her daughter, Mrs. Elsie Bauer, 14 Torrey st., Dorchester.

STAGE DEB WEDS IN CHICAGO

She married Jack Voorhis, a New York theater man, at Waukegan, Ill. The daughter of a Stamford, Conn., manufacturer, Miss Simmons is a graduate of an eastern finishing school.

General in Camp; Misses Salute

Fort Devens, July 25—Maj.-Gen. Frederick W. Coleman, chief of finance of the army forces, today opened a three-day check of accounts but without the four-gun salute that his rank commands.

Gen. Coleman was due to arrive here early yesterday and camp officers ordered a band and battery for the honors due him at the main gate. He did not arrive until late in the day after the band had been withdrawn.

The battery was kept on duty and was still on duty when the officer arrived, but he so calmly inquired directions that the sentry did not realize who he was until the general's car had passed through.

World Traveler Victim of Cyclist

Plmouth, July 25—Miss Rebecca Jackson, 84, of Leyden st., circled the world three times during her life but had to come home to be injured. She is in Jordan Hospital in a serious condition today as a result of being struck and knocked down by a bicycle while walking along North st., yesterday afternoon. The bicycle was being ridden by Harold Hunter, 13, of Jackson Lane.

TWO INJURED IN WIND STORM

Effingham Falls, N. H. July 24—A wind of tornado proportions injured two persons here and caused thousands of dollars damage to crops, farm properties and highways.

Striking in this section with sudden force, the wind, followed by rain, hail and lightning, uprooted trees, blocked highways and cut down half matured crops.

Irving Glidden and his son, Irving, were injured by falling telephone poles. The son was working on a pole which collapsed, throwing him to the ground. The force pulled down a second pole on which his father was at work.

Both were taken to a hospital in Wolfeboro, where their injuries were not considered critical.

Gypsies Sought in Abandonment

Fall River, July 25—Registration numbers of an auto, operated by gypsies, who abandoned a baby at the Municipal Hospital here three months ago, have been broadcast throughout New England by city officials in an effort to locate the parents of the infant.

The child is now practically fully recovered from the illness for which it was being treated.

UNCLE EPP ON 'CODE' NOW

Last night President Roosevelt appealed to employers in telegraph him of their co-operation in the "shorter hours, higher pay plan," to make it effective by Sept. 1.

Today the following telegram was sent to President Roosevelt by Frank I Dorr, president and treasurer of Raymond's:

"We'll do our part and a damsite more. Conditions of blanket code will be effective at once at Raymond's. No use waiting.
(Sig.) Raymond's, Inc."

In explaining the message, Mr. Dorr said that it would mean the immediate adoption of the 40-hour week for all employes. The store will be open as before.

The code, said Mr. Dorr, should not be used as an excuse to cut down business hours and so interfere with distribution of commodities. Instead, working hours will be cut down and additional help hired to take up the slack wherever needed.

Under the new arrangement, the store will also have a minimum wage scale of $15 the week, representing a one-dollar increase for minimum wages.

Litvinoff and Trotzky to Meet

London, July 25 (US)—The London Daily Herald in a dispatch from Paris today states Leon Trotzky, Soviet exile and former war commissar, is to meet Maxim Litvinoff, Soviet foreign commissar, at Royat, in southern France.

Litvinoff is at Royat with former French premier Andre Tardieu. France lifted its ban on Trotzky a few days ago only after approval from Moscow, which was announced by Litvinoff.

Navy Doctor Gets Transfer to N. Y.

Washington, July 25 — Lieut.-Comdr. Julius F. Neuberger, Naval Medical Corps, was ordered transferred from the Naval Hospital, Newport, R. I., to the Third Naval District, New York, by the Navy Department.

Both in Hospital From Hurts in the Crash; Reception Waits

New York, July 25 (INS)—In borrowed pajamas and better spirits, Capt. James A. Mollison, British flying ace and his wife, Amy Johnson Mollison, awoke in their hotel suite today to find New York impatiently waiting to accord them a royal welcome.

But it won't be accorded today. Physicians under whose care the famous flying couple was placed on their arrival at Floyd Bennett Field from Bridgeport, Ct., near where they crashed Sunday night, agreed Mollison and his wife were recovering well from their hurts, but that partiepation in a New York welcoming demonstration was out of the question for at least a few days.

Capt. Mollison and his wife finished the last 60 miles of their flight last night as passengers in an ambulance amphibian plane from Bridgeport, Ct., piloted by Ralph Wickford of the Boston airport.

Loses Life in Vain Try to Save Girl

Cranston, R. I., July 24—Elizabeth De Ware, 21, and Edward Madden, 22, drowned in Blackpone pond here when Madden attempted to save the girl after she had plunged into water she apparently thought was shallow.

Madden and Miss De Ware were in a rowboat with Hazel De Ware and a sister. Elizabeth jumped 25 feet from shore with a shout to Madden to "try and catch me." She could not swim.

Drops Dead in Office of Doctor

Haddonfield, N. J., July 25—Alfred D. Y. Glading, 30, a real estate broker, walked into the office of Dr. Lawrence Glover, who said he announced: "I've done something I'm sorry for, but I'm afraid it's too late."

Then Glading fell dead at the physician's feet. Dr. Glover said the broker's death was caused by poison.

17-Cent Waists Wanted in Lynn

Novel or not novel, the women of Lynn are being done in on this girth measuring plan to reckon admission prices to the First Christian Church vacation social, and complaints began to be heard today even as the measuring began.

The women can't win, and none but the thinnest of the ladies can get into the social on Friday night on even money terms with the men—and then they must be thick-necked men.

It's all because of the plan under which women who attend the social of the Lynn church will pay half a cent per inch of their waist measurement while men will pay a cent an inch per collar measurement.

The question of unfairness was raised today while Reta Metcalfe of 65 Chatham st., Lynn, at whose home the plan was devised, was measuring today the first of the prospective social goers—Mrs. Elsie Cummings of Chatham st., Perley Stanford and Miss Marie Diverst.

It was revealed then that a woman must be a 34 around the waist to get down to a 17-cent entrance fee, but that any man with a 17-inch neck, which is a greatly oversize neck, can get in at the same price. And there are few women whose waistlines today measure as slim as 34.

Oh, well!

Billiard cushion shows why
fresh Gulf gas is better

"See," . . . says the scientist, "the newer and livelier the billiard cushion, the more pep it gives the ball. Gasoline is like that—the fresher it is, the more pep and power it gives a car."

That's why it pays to get FRESH gas. And Gulf gas is always fresh. It's delivered fresh to every Gulf pump. And it stays fresh longer because Gulf's exclusive R-D-R process actually delays deterioration.

So get Gulf Gas—Fresh Gas. It gives more mileage. More power. It burns cleaner—knocks less—and gives you a faster start. Try a tankful today! No extra cost.

AIR HONEYMOON FOR DAUGHTER OF COOLIDGE

Fitchburg, July 25 (INS)—Wedding bells rang today as the culmination of a romance of official Washington.

Miss Helen Coolidge, daughter of United States Senator Marcus A. Coolidge, becomes the wife of Harry H. Woodring, assistant secretary of war and former governor of Kansas.

The scene of the wedding was at the Coolidge home. A further touch of official Washington was added with James Roosevelt, son of the President, as best man.

Attendants to the bride were her sisters, Mrs. Robert Earl Greenwood and Mrs. Donald Fell Carpenter. The officiating pastor was Rev. Max A. Kapp of the First Universalist Church. Two sons and two daughters of United States Senator Felix Hebert of Rhode Island fomred a string quartet for the bridal chorus.

The romance has a distinctly aerial tinge. Woodring flew from Washington to Boston for the wedding, and the couple plan to honeymoon in Europe by plane. Upon returning, they will fly to Kansas from New York.

Secretary of War George H. Dern came by plane and motor for the ceremony.

Miss Coolidge, who is 27, was graduated from the Mary C. Wheeler School in Providence, R. I., and from the Fine Arts School in Boston. She studied art in New York. She first met Woodring at a conference of governors in Washington two years ago.

Woodring is a native of Neodesha, Kan. He is 42 years old. He started life as a poor boy, at the age of ten doing janitor work in a bank. Like Senator Coolidge, he is a Democrat.

His big job in the War Department is handling the Civilian Conservation Corps.

LOST MAN MAY BE AFTER JOB

Relief that her missing 70-year-old husband, Asa Stanchfield of 19 Irma ave., Watertown, has begun a hunt for work, was expressed today by his wife as police searched for the elderly man who disappeared last Thursday.

Stanchfield, according to his wife, has never absented himself from home before, but of late has been talking about business recovery and his possible chance of obtaining employment.

When he left home he wore a gray suit, soft brown hat, black shoes and tortoise shell glasses. He is six feet tall, weighs about 170 pounds, and is of light complexion. Across his vest he wears a heavy gold watch chain, to which is attached an Indian head ornament.

Baby Victim of Gunman's Bullet

Baltimore, July 25—A two-year-old baby boy was struck on the face by a bullet fired into a parked automobile last night. The baby was not critically wounded.

Police said the shot was fired from a speeding roadster by Samuel Domino, 23, who later told authorities he was "so drunk he didn't remember" what he was doing.

Foreign War Vets Invite Roosevelt

Washington, July 25 (INS)—President Roosevelt had under advisement today an invitation to attend the 34th annual encampment of the Veterans of Foreign Wars in Milwaukee, Aug. 27-Sept. 1.

BOY CUT IN BITS, TOSSED IN SEA

San Diego, Cal., July 25 (INS)—Over a blood-stained trail of six unsolved murders, detectives backtracked today in an effort to find a clue to the seventh and most brutal murder of them all—that of little seven-year-old Dalbert Apashian, whose mutilated body was found in San Diego bay yesterday.

Police Chief Harry Raymond, formerly of Los Angeles, said no killing since the murder of Marian Parker, Los Angeles schoolgirl, by William Hickman, "the Fox," several years ago, has been so horrifying.

Dalbert, the son of Mr. and Mrs. George Apashian, clothing store proprietors, disappeared last Tuesday while on an errand.

The body was fully dressed when found. He had been strangled, beaten over the head, and his body dismembered.

When the fiend finished his horrible task, he dressed the body and buried it into San Diego Bay.

Rough Gary Faces Court Action

Los Angeles, July 25—During the year Gary Cooper, film actor, lived in the house she rented him, Mrs. Eliza Albertson said in municipal court, he broke lamps, glassware, kitchen equipment and statuary which she valued at $734.35.

Mrs. Albertson said she rented the actor the house for $4200 with the provision the tenant would pay for any damage during his occupancy. She said Cooper refused to pay her bill.

Included in the items Mrs. Albertson said were broken were a frying pan, an iron skillet, two champagne glasses, four wine glasses and a bronze statue of a faun. She asked an extra $10 because, she said, the residence was left in a "filthy and dirty" condition.

Europe Pins World's Hope on Roosevelt

New York, July 25 (AP)—Mayor Frank Hague of Jersey City, N. J., arrived in New York today aboard the liner Ile de France from Europe. He was enthusiastic over sentiment in Europe regarding President Roosevelt and the national recovery program.

"The sentiment everywhere is that in the United States lies the saving of the world. The confidently believe the depression is going to be licked by President Roosevelt."

PRISON LABOR CURB PLANNED

Washington, July 25 (US)—A far-reaching plan to curb competition of prison labor with private industry is being worked out today by the Industrial Recovery Administration.

Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, industrial administrator, is expected soon to call a conference of state governors in Washington to adopt an agreement to regulate prison production in conformity with the codes for industry.

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, suggested the move. He presented figures showing the estimated value of goods produced in prisons, federal, state and local, is approximately $131,000,000 annually.

WHAT IS AIR CONDITIONED REFRIGERATION?

It's a new, scientific way to keep food fresher, in both homes and stores. Operated with Boston Ice, Air Conditioned Refrigeration gently circulates cool, moist air around the food. That means food will stay fresh longer—and flavor will be retained. System is economical to operate. For further information telephone Kenmore 8160.

HITLER READY TO SUPPRESS NAZI REVOLT

By KARL H. VON WIEGAND
Copyright, 1933, by Universal Service, Inc.

Berlin, July 25—Chancellor Hitler, of Germany, and his righthand aide, Prussian Premier and Reich Minister of Air Capt. Hermann Wilhelm Goering, are determined to suppress drastically any attempts to dispute the power of the moderate wing of the Nazi party, it is learned.

GOERING HOLDS POWER

By new cabinet decree Capt. Goering is given power entitling him to call out the Reichswehr (German army) to act completely under the cabinet's orders to frustrate any anti-government attacks or movements not in the best interest of internal order.

The new law is pregnant with meaning and, in effect, as announced in the German official gazette, means that the government sanctions the use of the Reichswehr in connection with internal disorders.

Heretofore only President Von Hindenburg was constitutionally able to designate when and where the army was to be used in maintainance of law and order, and such a move was usually preceded by some form of martial law.

NO CHANCE OF RIOTS

The new decree specifies that governors of German States and Chancellor Hitler in Prussia can call directly upon the Reichswehr in case of need.

Since there is not the slightest probability under existing circumstances of riots, strikes or Communist or Socialist uprisings, it is believed the law was decreed in connection with persistent reports of alleged restlessness and radicalism among the Nazi Storm troops.

Dorothy Bell Plays Edith Estabrook

BACK IN ACTION AT 76

Fifty years seemed enough in the lobster business. But that was two years ago. Today Capt. Lorren C. Creamer is back at the old stand, Commercial Wharf, amid an average stock of 18,000 lobsters like the "Jumbo" he's holding here aloft.

"Well, we ain't caught a whale, but there's no water in the hold!"

That's how business is with Captain Lorren C. Creamer. In case you're not one of his neighbors in Waban, or you don't haul lobster pots for a living, or you don't own a hotel Capt. Creamer is the sage of Commercial Wharf.

Capt. Creamer is 76 years old. Ten years ago he became a big businessman. Treasurer of a large corporation, Capt. Creamer—like a chicken—had thrown off his shell and was ready for new waters.

For the captain had not always been in big business.

Thirty-seven years before he joined a merger, Creamer was a lobsterman. He fished off Gloucester. Then he came to Boston. He set up business as a lobster merchant on old Commercial Wharf, and now, a few doors away from where he started, he's back in business.

Big business didn't set well with Creamer, although he and his merger of independent lobster merchants was a success, and still is.

"No fun being responsible to a lot of people and stockholders," he explained. "Figger a fellow ought to have a little fun. We're pretty happy here. Now, when I want to flip a fin, I don't have to call a board meeting.

"I quit the company a few years ago and to show no hard feelin's I bought $30,000 in stock to wish them well. I was through for life."

Well, he's back. Two years away from the wharf was enough. Today, at 76, with the gusto of youth, the captain is "flippin' a fin" on his own, and with telling effect.

MOTHER SEES BODY IN RIVER

A mother's all-night vigil in the railroad yards along the Charles river came to an end today.

If there was just a faint glimmer of hope in the breast of Mrs. Julia Savi as she paced the river bank, it was extinguished today, when harbor police recovered from the muddy water the body of her five-year-old son, Ignatius.

But the mother had no tears as Lieut. Lawrence Dunn and his men, aboard the police boat Watchman, took the little body off the grappling irons. With a woman's intuition, she had gone to the river when her boy disappeared Sunday afternoon. Now her fears were only confirmed.

The boy's body was found near the Boston & Maine bridge, just west of Nashua st., at the spot where he was last seen playing. It was taken to the Northern Mortuary.

The family lives at 17 Minot st., West End.

This judge of fine food says: "More delicious than mayonnaise"

WE'VE submitted Kraft's new Miracle Whip Salad Dressing to a number of the most critical women in New England. They all agree that it tastes better than mayonnaise!

A flavor that's new and different—yet tantalizingly familiar—there's the secret of the instant popularity of this new type of dressing. It's not too tart. Not too bland. Not too oily. A perfect combination of true mayonnaise and true old-fashioned boiled dressing. Mixed from choice ingredients to a new creamy fluffiness in the exclusive Kraft Miracle Whip.

Try this new dressing on your favorite salad today. We think you'll prefer it to mayonnaise. Ask your grocer for Kraft's Miracle Whip Salad Dressing.

'BOGUS' COUNT AGREES TO LEAVE U. S.

His story of Hungarian nobility shattered by government agents, Edward Kameny, alias Bela Vajda von Kalonivsky, basked today in the none too gracious surroundings of the East Boston immigration station and soon will be enroute to Czechoslovakia.

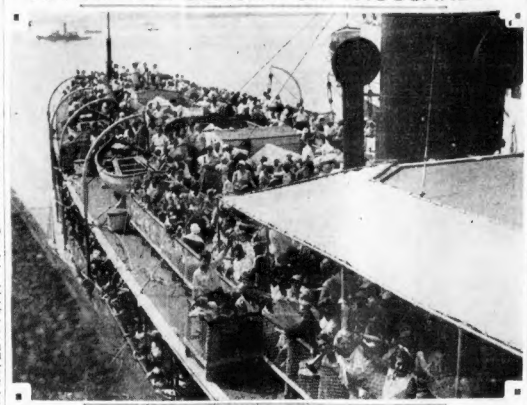
In federal court, where Kameny sought a habeas corpus to stay deportation, immigration authorities told of his blighted romance with Mrs. Rosalind Gleezer, wealthy society resident of West Hartford, Ct., and charged that Kameny originally entered this country illegally.

Kameny was "turned up" by D. L. Goldberg, West Hartford attorney and brother of Mrs. Gleezer, who charged that his sister acquired a dope habit from Kameny and was under his influence.

Atty. Goldberg said that Kameny called at his office last March and explained that he was descended from a long line of Hungarian nobility, was independently rich and that he had an annual income of $18,000 through extensive Hungarian estates. The recital ended with a proposal that Mrs. Gleezer be wed to him.

No sooner had the habeas writ been denied by Judge Lowell than Kameny announced through his counsel that he would ask permission to leave the country voluntarily instead of under deportation.

JOY AT THE BEACH FOR THOUSANDS



Crowded to the rails, one of the Nantasket steamboats is shown leaving Rowes Wharf yesterday with one of the boatloads of children and mothers that enjoyed a day at the beach and Paragon Park as guests of the Boston American, the steamboat company and the park management. It was a day that will be remembered long by both the children and mothers who had such a gala time. (Boston American Photo.)

THOUSANDS ARE BEACH GUESTS

It was emphatically Boston American Day at Nantasket Beach and at Paragon Park yesterday. Thousands upon thousands of boys and girls, accompanied by their mothers, spent the entire day there, taking advantage of the coupons printed in the Boston American which permitted them to enjoy all the delights of Paragon Park as well as the sea trip on the Nantasket Lines at a purely nominal cost.

The pleasure and happiness of the thousands who filled four huge steamers to their utmost capacity is reflected in the smiling faces of those pictured here. And these form but a portion of the vast crowd which thronged Paragon Park and the beach throughout the day.

The rides—those popular amusement devices known to youth as the merry-go-round, the roller coaster, the airplane whirl and so proved most popular during the day and the shrieks of delight from the happy children attested their enjoyment. And the 11 big amusement attractions, the Red Mill, the Fun House, all the others drew also their share of the gaiety and the wonders and delights of the day seemed never to end.

It was a day of supreme happiness both for the children and for their mothers, the latter needing relief from the daily labors of home work. No less than the children did they participate in the entertainment features and while less audible their delight was just as frankly expressed.

No single day's excursion venture has ever been more successful, more filled with entertainment.

BANKRUPT OWES $6,532,392

Assets of only $258,829 to meet liabilities of $6,532,392 were revealed today in federal court in a bankruptcy schedule filed by the New England Southern Corporation of 89 Broad st.

The corporation was petitioned into bankruptcy nearly a month ago by creditors, among them the president and fellows of Harvard University as well as a claim for $900, and a claim for $3,456,703.

There are about 2000 unsecured creditors.

Unsecured claims total more than $6,000,000. The assets are chiefly real estate, valued at $203,910; debts due in open account, $17,331, and stocks, negotiable bonds and other securities of uncertain value and amount.

HEARINGS END ON WOOL CODE

Washington, July 25 (AP)—Public hearings on a code of fair competition for the woolen textile industry closed today with a promise by Deputy Administrator A. D. Whiteside of the National Recovery Administration that every effort would be made to obtain speedy action.

An amendment offered by the manufacturers would provide that no employe would receive a smaller wage under the proposed 40-hour week than he had been receiving for a longer week. Another banned the "stretchout" system and called for appointment of a committee to make a further study of this problem.

Indications were that the code would be sent to the President with few if any changes, despite contentions of labor that a 36-hour week and minimum wage of $18 would meet needs of the textile industry more adequately than the code as presented by employers.

The code calls for a 40-hour week and minimum wages of $13 weekly in the South and $14 in the North.

Student Is Held in Factory Probe

Robert Warner, 27, of Brattle st, Cambridge, divinity school student, who was arrested twice by Watertown police, yesterday, for allegedly trying to "promote a new deal" among strikers in a Coolidge Hill rd. factory, will be arraigned in Waltham District Court today.

He was originally arrested, charged with passing out handbills without a license. After getting bail he returned to the factory and a short time later was again arrested.

BALBO FORCED TO CUT OUT BOSTON

Long Island, N. Y., at 10.01 daylights aving time this morning, is Shediac, N. B., a hope of 650 miles.

THOUSANDS ON WATCH

Boston swaited the mighty fleet with a thrill of anticipation, and had prepared a shriek of welcome from factory whistles and boats.

But the ceiling of dull grey clouds, already low, dropped steadily. The rain, although it let up for five or ten minutes, came down heavier, and an obnoxious east wind blew.

While eyes of thousands on the streets, in windows and on the roof tops strained toward the ballfling grey of the sky, and would-be escort planes hummed about, the Italian fliers boomed along the Connecticut and Rhode Island coasts, then over southern Massachusetts as far as Plymouth.

PASS OUT TO SEA

At Plymouth they were seen headed around toward Boston. At Cohasset they were still coming this way. But a little this side of Cohasset, the weather turned them into the northeast and their assault to Boston was a distant one.

The fleet passed over Plymouth at 12 o'clock, daylight time, and above Cohasset at 12.29. At 12.30 the tail-end of their two V-like formations was sighted near Boston Light by Crocker Snow. At 12.57 Gloucester saw them out toward the sea.

Boston's firm belief the ships would pass over here—a belief coupled with great enthusiasm especially in the North End and other communities where many folk of Gen. Balbo's race reside—was based on a telegram from him yesterday.

"We return your greetings," he wired to Consul-General Ermanno Armao of Boston. "And will return them again with our hearts, very soon, while flying with the Atlantic squadron over the city of Boston."

In the rain and east wind, Consul-General Armao waited and waited atop the Park sq. building, with a large Italian flag, until all hope of seeing the history-making fleet had gone.

The Boston Evening American conveyed the disappointing news to the Italian governments official representative here, and Signor Armao was well-nigh heartbroken.

HEARTS GROW LIGHTER

Others who waited in the rain were also visibly disappointed, but as the news was confirmed, and they relinquished their hope and their watching, their thoughts in most cases turned to the safety of the armada of the skies. To make hearts lighter, weather reports showed improving conditions to the northeast.

Fears were still expressed, however, for the safety of the huge squadron of 24 swiftly flying planes, slicing between threatening water and threatening clouds, off the rocky coast of Maine.

A number of pilots, including Ralph Wickford at the controls of a giant tri-motor, braved the adverse conditions over Boston to prepare an escort of welcome for the fleet. There were several army and navy ships in the air also, and some commercial and private planes, all with warnings to keep their distance from the fleet.

Lieut. Crocker Snow made his dash down the harbor against the wind and rain just in time to give Boston's salute to the men dashing toward New Brunswick, the Atlantic and Rome. It was a solitary salute in place of the glorious one that Boston hearts had planned.

Gen. Balbo, his dress uniform of white changed to one of working blue, took his ships out of Jamaica bay in thrilling style.

The sky was overcast. A brisk wind was blowing. But the takeoff had been postponed a day already, and conditions were reported sufficiently good all the way to Boston and New Brunswick to warrant the start for home.

The first plane was in the air at 10.01 a. m., daylight time, the last at 10.18.

Gen. Balbo was in the 20th plane to leave the water. The other planes circled over the field until the general and the planes leaving after him were in the air and then with Balbo in the lead, flew away.

FIVE-HOUR FLIGHT.

The Italians planned to make the 650-mile hop to Shediac in from four to five hours. They will rest there for a few days before resuming their flight. Gen. Balbo will decide after he gets there whether to take the northern or the southern route.

"Viva America." "Viva Italy."

Col. Mario Infante, representative of General Balbo at Floyd Bennett field, announced that special mail and valuable papers were on the S. S. Bremen, arriving tomorrow and that a speed plane would be chartered at the airport in an effort to get this mail to Balbo before he leaves Shediac, N. B.

NO TRACE FOUND OF PRISONER

Police have asked officials of Rhode Island, Connecticut and New York to be on the lookout for John B. McCarthy, of Freeport st., Dorchester, who leaped from a train outside Back Bay station Sunday to escape from officers who were bringing him back to New Hampshire State prison.

Information reaching police led them to believe McCarthy was trying to make his way back to New York. He was picked up there a few days ago after escaping from the New Hampshire prison with two other inmates last July 10.

OFFICIALS SEEK MISS MINTER

Los Angeles, July 25 (US)—Mary Miles Minter, former film star, was sought by district attorney's investigators today to determine whether she will press charges that her mother, Mrs. Charlotte Shelby, defrauded her of large sums of money.

The hunt followed sentencing to San Quentin prison of Leslie B. (Les') Henry, former Pasadena rose tournament official and stock broker, convicted on five counts of grand larceny and three of forgery. His term is 2 to 24 years.

In sentencing Henry, Judge Burnell linked Mrs. Shelby with the loss of Miss Minter's money and recommended that the district attorney take action.

Mattern to Finish Trip Around World

Fairbanks, Alaska, July 25 (INS) —Jimmy Mattern intends to continue on to New York with his rescue expedition and thus complete his world flight, The Texas airman, and his three companions who set out in search of him shortly after his plane crashed in northeastern Siberia, indicated they would make the trip to New York in easy jumps as soon as word is received from New York backers.

Morgan's Aids Lodge in Welfare Outing

Several hundred boys and girls were given the time of their lives at a picnic yesterday at Houghtons Pond in the Blue Hills. The outing was arranged under the auspices of the Moses Mendelsohn Lodge, Free Sons of Israel. The children were taken from several community centers, among them the Jewish Welfare Center, the Children's Home, the Crawford St. Hebrew School and the Dorchester and Mattapan Hebrew School.

The outing was made possible through the courtesy of the Morgan Furniture Co., which loaned its trucks to the lodge for transportation of the children.

U. S. TO RESUME NEW BUILDING

Washington, July 25 (AP)—The Treasury Department prepared today to put in motion again its huge public building program with funds alloted from the $3,300,000,000 public works pool.

No contracts for public buildings have been awarded since March 4 when the Roosevelt Administration diverted funds intended for new buildings to the Civilian Conservation Corps.

The allotment from the public works amounted to $6,971,645 to be spread over 14 projects, the largest of which is the postoffice annex in New York City to cost $4,826,000.

Early announcement of the names of regional and state public works administrators was promised by Secretary Ickes' organization today, but there was no indication a sto the exact time.

The men to be selected will cooperate with the central agency here in picking out the most worthy projects to be constructed in the government's vast re-employment program.

Sunlight Hospital Fete at Cohasset

An outdoor event of unusual variety and scope will be presented for the benefit of the Children's Sunlight Hospital Tuesday, Aug. 8, when Mrs. C. Griggs Plant offers, on the grounds of her estate, Riverview Farm, Cohasset, a program including a brilliant comic opera, "The Secret of Suzette." A series of solo and ensemble numbers by a group of dancing girls, and feats of magic and illusion by an Oriental mystic.

In connection with the performance Mrs. Plant will again throw open for inspection the gardens of the estate.

Bleriot to Balbo--24 Year Epoch!

Twenty-four planes left Jamaica Bay today at the will of a bearded young Italian, Italo Balbo, to fly in ocean.

From Calais, France, to Dover, Eng., is barely twenty-five miles. Bleriot flew it; and the day is an epochal anniversary.

Balbo's fleet of planes flew from Italy to Illinois; nor did the towering Alps dismay them, nor the grumbling sea.

Twenty-four planes . . . twenty-four years . . . Calais to Dover, Orbetello to Chicago. . . . Bleriot to Balbo.

In between those years has been death. "Plane crashes, pilot killed"—"wing crumbles, plane falls"—"sea claims ocean flier." Those were the headlines.

But there have been other headlines, too history headlines. "Flies Chicago to New York non-stop"; "plane aloft a week"; "Lindbergh lands in Paris." Those were the headlines.

Before Bleriot—six years before—there had been Orville Wright. He flew 120 feet, and dumbfounded the world.

Louis Bleriot—The Channel.

Charles Lindbergh—The Atlantic.

Wiley Post—The world.

6 TRIPS to the WORLD'S FAIR

For New England Boys and Girls---From 6 to 12 Years

CLIP THE ENTRY COUPON TODAY AND SEND IN YOUR PICTURE

No Contest To Enter!
Nothing To Write!
No Work To Do!

THE RULES

Any boy or girl, from 6 to 12, inclusive, is eligible. No boy or girl any member of whose family is an employe of the Boston Sunday Advertiser or Boston Evening American may enter the competition.

The competition to select the "Typical New England Boy and Girl" will open today, July 23, and all entries must be made and photographs submitted before midnight, Monday, August 21, at which time the competition closes. Winners will be announced in the Boston Sunday Advertiser of August 27.

All photographs submitted must be accompanied by a correct and complete identification. For this purpose it is suggested that the coupons printed early day be used to accompany the photographs.

No photograph can be returned. This must be thoroughly understood.

All photographs should be addressed to the "Boy and Girl Editor, Boston Sunday Advertiser and Boston American, P. O. Box 1017, Boston, Mass."

Children (or parents) submitting photographs should be careful to give the name of the school which they attend, public, private or parochial; the name of the principal or teacher, grade, name of parents in full and correct street address as well as the name of the city and state in which they live.

The Judges, whose decision will be final, are Cyrus Dallin, internationally known sculptor; Patrick T. Campbell, Superintendent of Public Schools in Boston, and Mrs. Eva Whiting White, social and civic leader.

The boy and girl selected by Judges as most typical of New England children will, with their parents, be guests of the Boston Sunday Advertiser and the Boston Evening American on a nine-day tour which includes a visit to the "Century of Progress Exposition" at Chicago, with all expenses of the four parents and two children paid by these newspapers.

The twelve children, six boys and six girls, selected by the Judges as being next in line, will be awarded $100 each, this cash award being a gift from the Boston Sunday Advertiser and the Boston Evening American.

There are no votes to be cast, nothing, in short, to do except to mail your photograph as soon as possible correctly identified, to "Boy and Girl Editor, P. O. Box 1017, Boston, Mass."

The Boston Sunday Advertiser and the Boston Evening American reserve the right to make any changes deemed necessary, in their opinion, in any or all of the above rules; and the entry of a participant is a complete acceptance of all these conditions now made or to be made.

The AWARDS to 14 Boys and Girls

The winning boy and girl, selected from all entries will go to the World's Fair, at Chicago, with their mothers and fathers will ALL EXPENSES PAID as guests of these two newspapers. They will travel in luxurious drawing-rooms of a crack limited to and from Boston. They will stay at the Palmer House, one of Chicago's best hotels, with plenty of time to visit the Fair for several days. All the expenses of these six people, one boy, one girl and four parents, will be paid and sufficient funds provided for plenty of amusement at the Fair. They will remember this trip as long as they live.

PILGRIMAGES ARE BEING MADE TO the various shrines of history all over New England this summer and one of the most interesting and notable is that to the restoration of the Town of Williamsburg, Va. . . .

It is not often that such an extensive project is undertaken and Perry, Shaw and Hepburn, names well-known in New England, are the architects who are carrying on the restoration . . .

MARY CLEVELAND

Last week, Mr. and Mrs. T. Mott Shaw invited members of the Antiquarian Society and Art Association of Concord to a preview of the photographs of the unit; the fact that it is closely associated with the colonial history of our country gives it a patriotic appeal, and the friends in Concord thoroughly enjoyed the exhibition . . .

Assisting Mr. and Mrs. Shaw were Mrs. Allen French, Miss George S. Keyes, Mrs. Stedman Buttrick, Sr., Mrs. Gaylord C. Cummin and Mrs. Hans W. Miller . . .

The exhibit is at the Antiquarian Society and Concord is indeed fortunate and appreciative of the opportunity to have the etchings and paintings of the restoration plan in display . . . they will remain for more than a month for the benefit of the general public and they will be well worth a pilgrimage to Concord to see . . .

We hear that the fair bride-to-be, Mary Cleveland, has chosen Saturday, August 26, for her wedding date to Mr. Nicholson, and the wedding trip will be a few weeks on a Western ranch . . . Miss Cleveland's engagement was announced about two months ago . . .

Henry S. Thompsons Entertain

MR. AND MRS. HENRY S. THOMPSON invited the members of the Surette Summer School of music to supper at their estate on Fairhaven Hill, Concord, recently, and in the evening the guests enjoyed folk dancing on the lawn . . .

Harding Newman, son of Mrs. Frederick Eaton, has gone for his vacation to a ranch at Sheridan, Wyoming, "Tee-Pee Lodge" is the name . . . The Frederick Eatons are sailing next Sunday for Ireland for a month and will take in the Dublin Horse Show while there . . . Their daughter, Miss Dorothea Newman, is visiting her friend, Miss Beatrice Murray, daughter of Prof. and Mrs. Murray, at Southwest Harbor in Maine; she will take the Gaspe Peninsula trip before returning to Concord . . .

James Baldwin has just spent his summer vacation with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. David Baldwin, in Concord . . . Mr. Baldwin resides in New York where he is connected with a prominent banking house . . .

On Motor Trip Through Maine

MRS. RUSSELL ROBB left this week with her friend, Miss Jane Brooks, of Salem, for a ten-day motor trip in Maine; they plan to make a stop in York Harbor and then drive down the coast, stopping at various points of interest . . .

The Brooks Stevens of Concord have taken a cottage at Annisquam for the summer . . . they have recently purchased the house of Charles Hovey Pepper, the artist, on Elm st., Concord, and they will occupy it on their return from the beach . . .

The Winthrop Hodges are down in Nahant for the hot months . . . and maybe the cold ones. They have sold their house in Concord and are flirting with the idea of making Nahant their year-round home.

Mrs. Lawton Champie and her young daughter are making a long visit with Mrs. Norman Harrower (her mother) at North Haven, Maine . . . you know North Haven is that large island off the coast where everything social is in a huddle, the yacht club, the postoffice and the various summer houses, and you must be "in the huddle" to count for anything at this exclusive resort . . .

Miss Marian Homans is spending the next few weeks on the Isle of Shoals . . .

Many at Duxbury Yacht Club Dance

THE YOUNG FOLKS HAD A DELIGHTFUL time at the Duxbury Yacht Club dance the other night . . . we glimpsed Betty Soule, prominent Junior League member, and Mrs. James Garfield, who has one of the beautiful places at Powder Point; the Coffin girls, Hannah, who came out last year, and the debutante of this coming season, Miss Barbara; also Miss Louise Coburn and her friend, Mrs. H. Parker Whittington, and Constance Young, pretty daughter of the Harold Youngs, who have one of the show places of Duxbury . . . when the tide is high. Everything is lovely at high tide . . . yes?

Constance Young

The Robert Belknaps have returned on the Flighty, the B. Devereaux Barker's yacht which was on the Eastern Yacht Club cruise and are spending the next few weeks at their summer home at Duxbury . . . their daughter who was the beautiful Helen Belknap, and is now Mrs. Arnold Scott, Jr., is visiting them . . .

Margery Motley, daughter of the Preble Motleys, Jr., of Wenham, is entertaining Miss Frances Lowell of Mt. Vernon st. as house guest . . . Miss Lowell is the daughter of the Alfred Putnam Lowells. Miss Motley has been hostess to a number of her school friends at the Ethel Walker School in Simsbury, Ct., where she will attend next season.

Chatty Notes of Social Circles

MISS CATHERINE RICHARDSON, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Otis Weld Richardson, is spending the entire summer at Gloucester where she has joined the Little Theater group. As this is her first season in amateur dramatics she has not appeared in any plays yet. Her parents are at their summer home in Magnolia, and her sister, Miss Polly Richardson, who came out several years ago, is enjoying the delights of Europe.

THE MISSES POLLY, LEE and Sally Palfrey, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. John Gorham Palfrey of Boston and Sharon, are entered in the tennis tournaments at the Lawn Tennis Club in Seabright, N. J., which opened yesterday.

BOOKS---And Other Things

By Charles Hanson Towne

A lady in a small Illinois town rather applauds me for a simple and innocent phrase used in this column a short time ago. In speaking of Prohibition I had said that "it is taken for granted that in every civilized American home, claret or sauterne is served, preceded by the stimulating cocktail."

The lady wishes me to define for her what a civilized home is, and she asks me to classify the thousands of American homes composed of refined, educated, substantial American citizens who do not serve wine and cocktails. Also she wishes to know how I would classify the women, like herself (she calls them "females"), who have not learned to drink and who have no intention of learning. She continues, "You probably think I haven't been around much, True," she confesses, but adds, "How much are you out around anywhere outside of New York?"

* * *

Well, dear lady, I somehow manage to get around and observe life as it is led not only in this country but abroad. I am not one of those parochial New Yorkers who believe that my city is the centre of the universe, or even typical of America. I admit its faults as a great city, but I see its tolerance and charm, too. But I would venture the guess that in every community, since Prohibition, came upon us, a drink could be easily obtained. And that is a terrible indictment of our law.

It is because I would like to see conditions changed that I sometimes write as I do about the Eighteenth Amendment.

* * *

Years ago we used to go to Maine, a so-called dry State in those days, and our best American citizens would order liquor by telephone to Boston, and it would be shipped over by express in no time. Even the citizens who dwelt in Maine all the year 'round did exactly as we visitors did. There was little, if any, respect for the local law.

You must remember that laws are only man-made. They are not necessarily documents, and when they are evil laws, creating disrespect and are against the intelligent judgment of vast numbers of people, they are always disobeyed and held in disrepute. Millions of us who count ourselves among the good citizens of this country do not believe it is wrong to drink in moderation. And no mere legislator, who, nine times out of ten imbibes whiskey and gin freely in secret, can convince us otherwise.

We have seen Europeans sitting over one aperitif for hours; we have observed German families at peace over a single leiter of wholesome beer in sunny gardens; and we, who call ourselves intelligent, have been used to our little carafe of red wine with our evening meal, and we went the stigma that has been placed upon a natural beverage. We are nothing evil in it, and we doubt if we ever will. There is little drunkenness abroad, save in the slums of London. Alas! There is shameful drunkenness in America, particularly since 1919.

We think of civilized homes as places where wine, and even a limited number of cocktails are served, to be partaken of as one wishes. I know many admirable people who never touch liquor of any kind, and I respect them, too. I also know many who drink when and where and what they desire, and I respect them, too. At the marriage feast of Cana wine was served. I feel certain it was not grapejuice. Needless beer was unheard of until the Volstead act was upon us. Fortunately, it is not consumed now, and we are all the better for that. But it would have gone on being used if we had not intelligently changed a wretched law.

* * *

Prohibition may have been an experiment noble in motive; but every country that has tried it has done away with it. Surely you would not have Americans use less intelligence than the Finns? They, homes are now back to normalcy, to use an expression of one of our late Presidents.

It is the little superfluities of life that make it endurable and pleasanter as Stevenson, a moderate drinker, once said. But please don't let me urge you to take a glass of claret if you do not care to do so; but, my dear lady, you are not aware of what you have missed. It is like not having ridden horseback, or never knowing how to play any of the games which all civilized and well-organized people indulge in. But over-exercise is as bad for us as none at all.

I do respect your point of view, however. I only ask, in return, that you respect mine. We need tolerance and mutual understanding in this wonderful country of ours. One of these days we are going to get them. They are as necessary as the air we breathe, if we are ever to get out of the fog that envelops us. (Copyright 1933.)

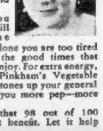
HEALTH MEANS CHARM AND HAPPINESS



Sparkling eyes and smiling lips speak of health and vitality. Clear skin attracts. The healthy active girl is both happy and popular.

Perhaps you are not really ill yet when the day's work is done you are too tired to enter into the good times that other women enjoy. For extra energy, try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It tones up your general health. Gives you more pep—more charm.

Remember that 98 out of 100 women report benefit. Let it help you too.

Roof Garden Is Planned for Event

A group of post debutantes and their friends will assist the men on the committee for the Harvard Crimson dance Friday at the Crimson building on Plympton st., in Cambridge.

The dance is for summer school students and their friends. The humble roof of the Crimson building will be transformed into a roof garden for the evening, with Japanese lanterns, evergreens and an orchestra.

The girls who will lend their aid are the Misses Henrietta Young, Abigail Aldrich, Bunny Stone, Barbara Eustis, Laura Curran and the Countess Anastasia Seramovna.

Serving as patronesses for this novel party are Mrs. N. Henry Black, Mrs. Reuben Emerson Young, Mrs. Mary Nichols, Mrs. Henry Greenleaf Pearson, Mrs. Joseph J. Thorndike, Mrs. Arthur N. Holcombe and Mrs. George Alexander Emerson.

The ushers will be H. Lawrence Bogart, chairman; Frederick H. White, Henry G. Pearson, Philip Cushing, Rodman W. Paul, Harry Kern, R. A. Benson, Jr., G. Alexander Emerson, Jr., and Mr. Henry W. L. Dana.

During the supper intermission at midnight a sample copy of the Crimson will be run off for the edification of the guests, containing news and jokes, which they themselves have contributed during the evening.

Gardens Open on North Shore

Mrs. Morgan Harris has announced a list of prominent members of the younger social set on the North Shore who will help to guide the guests round the lovely gardens which are being opened on the North Shore today to benefit the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children.

Included in this list are Mrs. Laurence H. Johnson, Jr., Mrs. Raymond Lapham, Mrs. Rufus Cashman, Mrs. Amos F. Breed, Mrs. B. Devereux Barker, Jr., Mrs. W. Elliott Pratt, Jr., Mrs. Hamilton Edwards, Mrs. Edward Starkis, Jr., Mrs. Paul D. Rust, Mrs. Ward Paine, Miss Elizabeth Hovey, Miss Margaret Hoe, Miss Margaret Emerson and Miss Marjorie Saltonstall. Miss Saltonstall will sell tickets for tea, which will be served around Mrs. M. Graeme Haughton's lovely swimming pool. Miss Hovey will have charge of the girls who will act as waitresses.

Barbara McFadden Weds Detroit Man

Canton, Pa., July 25 (AP)—Miss Barbara McFadden, daughter of Rep. and Mrs. Louis T. McFadden, became the bride of Henrik M. C. Luykx of Detroit last night.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. R. W. Shepherd of Endicott, N. Y., former pastor at Canton. Mrs. Thomas Martin, 2nd, of Cambridge, Mass., was matron of honor.

TAKE ADVANTAGE OF OUTDOOR SEASON TO LEARN TO BREATHE BENEFICIALLY

Breathing and Arm Exercises Are Good for Retaining Firmness of Bust

By Therese Deschamps

SINCE THIS is the season when most of us stay outdoors as much as possible, we might as well take advantage of that fact for Beauty's sweet sake. There is much to be gained in the simple process of breathing. That is, if we know how.

Tight corsets have caused the majority of women to breathe incorrectly—high in their chests. Perhaps the first thing we should suggest, then, in this business of breathing is that one see that her corset, or girdle, as we call them now, isn't so tight that it hampers. It isn't necessary to be encased in cement in order to have a good figure. At least not if one is healthy and can take a few exercises to firm her muscles.

To breathe correctly one should use her entire lung area, from the abdominal region to the upper chest. Not consciously, of course, but once one gets into the habit of taking deep, "thorough" breaths every now and then during the day, she will soon find herself breathing more deeply as a matter of course.

Complete Breath

A famous beauty specialist tells us that the Hindu Yogis have what they call a "complete breath" which is reputed to give one renewed energy and sustained youth.

To do it, one must stand erect and inhale through the nostrils, first filling the abdominal section until the stomach walls seem distended, then filling the rib section, and lastly the upper chest. Hold the breath for several seconds and exhale slowly. This is a continuous motion. Once you master it, you can feel a sort of rotary breath going deep, filling higher, still higher, then hold, and out. An inner massage that's extremely good for the system.

Good Exercise

There is a breathing exercise that is excellent for retaining—or creating—firmness for the bust. It combines breathing and an arm movement. Stand erect with arms straight in front. Inhale a "complete" breath. Swing the right arm around in a large circle while you hold the breath. Then exhale. Repeat with the left arm. Exhale, and repeat with both arms together. You can readily see how beneficial this should be for the entire upper figure.

If you have beauty questions with which we can assist, please address Therese Deschamps, Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop sq., Boston. Please inclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope if the name of products or a personal reply is required. This column is continued each week in the Boston Sunday Advertiser.

Beauty Queries and Answers

Gray Hair an Asset

Question: I have a tremendous lot of gray hair. It started when I was thirteen. I am seventeen now, and through these past four years it has increased immensely. Please advise me what to do about it. And please tell me what to do to grow taller. Have I too much weight for my height? — Miss J. F., Haverhill, Mass.

Answer: If I were you, I should look upon gray hair as an asset and play up to it. With individuality at such a premium, I hope I can convince you you are fortunate. Keep your hair looking glossy, well-shampooed, and well-waved at all times. Put a bit of bluing in the rinse to keep any yellow glints from creeping into it, and you might choose a way of wearing it that is distinctive. I knew a professional model one time who was just a little older than you, and her hair had a generous silver streak. It was fascinating.

As for your height (your chart says 4 feet, 10 inches, and you weigh 114 pounds), I should say that the only thing you could do to increase it is to reduce your weight. Then you would SEEM to be taller. According to our way of figuring (there is no real cut-and-dried weight and height proportion) you should weigh only about 100 pounds.

Bleaching Creams

Question: I am seventeen years of age. Last summer I got a nice tan which during the winter began to wear off in places. These marks look terrible. Please tell me what I can do.

Miss T. S., No. Randolph, Mass.

Answer: There are a number of good creams on the market that have bleaching qualities. You try smoothing them all over your face, arms, and chest where you say the tan has not worn off. There are stronger bleaches that you can use, but I should use them only if the cream fails. They are drying to the skin and must be counteracted with nourishing creams.

Amy and Jean Find New Use for 'Keeping Fit Diet' Dinner

"CONGRATULATIONS!" Amy Moserve's eyes lighted on the kitchenette table as she came in, and she spoke in the direction of the living room. "The pot roast and its lowly onions and string beans make a symphony of color on the bargain-sale green glass dishes!"

The locale is 8 Lancaster st., Cambridge, where two girl sisters have undertaken the Keeping Fit reducing diet and are informing the Boston Evening American of their progress. Amy started 20 pounds overweight, and Jean with only 12 pounds to lose.

"Like it?"

At the suppressed excitement in Jean's voice Amy turned and saw her arrayed in a new pink crepe.

"Say—the pounds you lost have made a difference in your sh—"

"Hush!" Jean held up a warning finger. "We have company!"

"What's it like?"

Amy smoothed her hair and spoke in a lowered voice. "That fortune-telling weight card certainly worked fast. Dark man coming into my life—"

"You're on the wrong tack, Amy. The 155 pounds referred to you all right, but that's all, at least as far as this dark man is concerned."

Amy suddenly doubled over in a spasm of suppressed laughter. With an alarmed look toward the living room, Jean grabbed the other girl's arm.

"He'll think you're crazy. What's the matter?"

Amy gasped weakly. I've heard of catching a beau with a steak smothered in onions, slathered with mushrooms and mashed potato, but never with a reducing diet! Girl, you're starting a new technique."

'WERE T'OTHER DEAR CHARMER AWAY!'

Drawn by Nell Brinkley

"How happy he could be with either were the other dear charmer away." Jack's a very nice young man whom all the Jills believe a bachelor because he lacks sentiment. He has brain, and enough of brawn to look like a proper son of Adam; he is kind and sweet-tempered, and he has a job. The money that comes to his mail-box at the end of the week is enough, if managed, to keep a young wife too.

Yet he still wanders wifeless, the delightful and troublous paths of the world alone. And the girls he eyes with a wistful look, dances with at the Inn on Lookout, swims with in the glittering sea of Miami, tell the world it is because he is one of the Nineteen Thirty-three brand of young man, is without romance and the impulses of sentiment and Goddess-making. He builds no Galatea and worships at no feminine altar. But they are wrong.

The trouble is that Jack was "roped in" long ago. He is East and West, Land and Sea,—minded. The rope is not one but twain, that Cupid was guilty of twirling to his dis-ease. Nautical, and Plainsman. He has seen and known both the girl who walks a deck and the one who fits leather in a stirrup, the girl in the pert "polt" and the one in the ten-gallon; and so Jack is a bachelor!

It is the charm of sage-brush fragrance against the sting of the sea-salt. The feminine figure in slacks and all the adornment of the girl who goes down to sea in ships in Summer, against the girl in boots and fawn-colored breeches, gay handkerchiefs; the lingo of the dude-ranch or rosey feminine lips against the phrases of the canvas deck and the flowing wave.

And Jack will always be a bachelor, not because he has too little heart, but because he has too much, and has doubly lost it!

—NELL BRINKLEY.

Lure That Lurks in the Dainty Tea Leaf

THE AVERAGE American woman has yet to learn the lure that lurks in the dainty tea leaf. Besides being a stimulant to tired nerves, a cup of tea may be made to bring a welcome to the morning meal and prove a grateful comfort at the evening repast.

Because the tang of tea stimulates the brain and furnishes the pep to put a man over the top in a day's battle, tea should be considered a man's drink as well as a woman's.

Learning to use tea is all in finding out what kind of tea you really like. I think the reason that we as a nation do not serve tea more largely is because we know so little about tea in its infinite varieties and do not experiment to find out what kind our family likes best.

Taken in moderation, tea acts as a mild stimulant; providing a considerable amount of needed water is an added virtue. It heats the body in Winter and cools it in Summer. For the aged, it provides a valuable stimulant as the functional activities of the stomach become weakened. Please try this refreshing

Tea Punch

(Two Quarts)

1 cup hot tea
1 cup sugar
¾ cup orange juice
1-3 cup lemon juice
1 pt. ginger ale
1 pt. water
Few slices of orange

Pour tea over sugar, cool and add fruit juices; turn into a large punch bowl over blocks of ice. Just before serving, add pale dry ginger ale, ice water and orange slices.

Shandygaff for Porch Parties

(Three Quarts)

1 qt. hot freshly made tea
3 cups sugar
10 lemons
3 pint bottles pale dry ginger ale

When making the tea, allow one tsp. to a cup of boiling water. Strain and stir in sugar; when dissolved, add the lemon juice. Set aside to cool. At serving time, pour it over a block of ice and add the pale dry. Pour into a shallow punch bowl and garnish with thin slices of lemon, orange, and red and green cherries with sprigs of fresh mint.

Tomorrow's Menu

Slightest Dog Bite May Result Seriously if Neglected

By DR. R. S. COPELAND

"RABIES," or "hydrophobia," is a disease caused by the bite of a mad dog. If you have ever observed the intense suffering of one of its victims, you can truly appreciate the horror of this accident.

Dr. Copeland

Every year thousands of persons are bitten by dogs. If the dog has rabies in its saliva this will transmit the disease to the human. Though the number of cases of rabies has greatly decreased, a recent report shows that the number of dog bites has increased within the past few years. The decrease in hydrophobia can only be attributed to our modern methods of treating it.

This improvement has followed the administration of a preparation called "anti-rabic" vaccine. It is given every day from 14 to 28 days. The vaccine is of no value if given after the germs have entered the nervous system of the victim.

Every dog bite must be considered serious. The wound should be treated immediately with fuming nitric acid, if it can be had. This is painful, but it will prevent future suffering. Cauterization is beneficial, but not enough to prevent rabies.

It is not necessary to kill the suspected dog. But it should be kept under close observation. If the animal shows signs of rabies, immediate injection of the anti-rabic vaccine is advised for the one who has been bitten. Delay is dangerous.

Too often a dog bite is neglected. The damaged skin is accepted as "all in play." This accident is common among children who play with dogs. It is true that many a dog, when teased will snap at a child. This does not mean it is a mad dog, but if the germs are present in the saliva it will transmit the disease to the unsuspecting victim. A dog bite must never be considered as harmless.

Man Married 'In Spite'

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Before I married, I kept company with a girl for over a year, and through misunderstanding on both our parts we separated. Shortly after I married another girl, which was a "spite marriage" and against the wishes of her mother. We have one child. I tried to make a go of things, but as usual it did not work out. About six months ago, by accident, I met this first girl, and we have been going together ever since. We renewed our friendship, which ripened into love. What tactics do you think I should use to tell this to my wife, without causing a great deal of unpleasantness? JERRY.

Dear Jerry: There are no such tactics. We either make the best of our mistakes or become quitters. Even a child who is entitled to the protection of his father, and to have a normal home life. Children are not responsible for "spite" marriages, and it's a pity that they have to be their victims. Very probably, if you divorced your wife and married this other girl, you'd find life had just as many problems—plus alimony. Please don't jump from the frying pan into the fire.

Proper Way to Drink Coffee

By MRS. BEECKMAN

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

1. My friend believes that it is correct to test the heat of coffee by using a spoon, but I think it looks very awkward. Will you please tell me which is correct?

2. Also, is this letter-paper correct for personal correspondence? P.

1. Your friend is right. The coffee is stirred, once or twice with the spoon, and then the heat is tested by taking a sip with the cup.

2. Yes, your letter paper is proper for social correspondence.

RENE CLAIR FOR HOLLYWOOD

Famous French Director Lost Previous Chance Because of His Temperament

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor Universal Service
Copyright, 1933, by Universal Service, Inc.

Los Angeles, July 25—America never produced a director as temperamental as Rene Clair. His sensational success, "Under the Roofs of Paris" gave the French director independent ideas on how he should handle these Hollywood producers. Temperament is the one thing that will frighten any producer so Mr. Clair was allowed to cool his heels.

He has now had plenty of time to think over the matter and he has decided to come to America to make a picture.

Louella O. Parsons

He will be managed by Schulberg-Feldman and upon their assurance that he will not demand the moon and stars and a separate studio, there is little doubt that he will land himself a job. He is a great director and if he doesn't go haywire in this country he should be an addition to the picture business.

She Bars Henri

The legend that Lilian Harvey has got her small foot down and absolutely refused to play in the same picture with Henri Garat may or may not be true. Can't a lady have her preferences? Lilian won't have to be wooed by the French whirlwind. That honor already belongs to Gene Raymond. This story deals with the Puppeteers and Roland V. Lee, director and Sam Behrman, author, have gone on to New York to look them over.

Tallulah's Role

Tallulah Bankhead's hurried trips to Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer haven't been social calls on Adrian, her good friend. She has been talking business. Tallulah is up for the role in "Biography" that Ina Claire had on the stage. She expects to return to New York not later than August 15 for "Jezebel," her stage play, but "Biography" is the one play that does appeal to Miss Bankhead and there is a chance she may be able to postpone rehearsals on her play which doesn't open until fall.

Parsons, Jr., Next

This is "all revoir" to this column for a few weeks. I am parking the typewriter and forgetting pencils and copy paper and taking the screwy brain away for a rest. I expect to come back so pepped up that I can work 24 hours a day without stopping. In my absence, Parsons, Jr., as per usual, will run the column. Pay no attention to her if she complains about paying grocery bills and gardener's salary. I am leaving her enough bills and nothing to do but write the column, and that, she has demonstrated in the past, she is able to do successfully.

Chatter in Hollywood:

Speculation is rife in film circles as to what has actually happened to Lily Damita and her shadow, Sidney Smith. Sid Blane, from current reports, has simply walked off with Lily's beau, and European theatrical circles are chattering busily. Sally seems to be doing all right for herself, having had more attention than any 10 movie stars. She and Sidney Smith, according to a friend in London, are seen everywhere together.

* * *

Marion to Dance:

The pupils of Arthur Prince of the Ernest Belcher School of Dancing have doubtless been poring him these last few weeks. Mr. Prince hasn't done a disappearing act, on the contrary, he has been working hard. Marion Davies, whose next picture, "Paid to Laugh," calls for dancing, has been going through her dance routine under Mr. Prince's tutelage. Vacationing far up in the northern woods, Marion has permitted other members of the camp to go horseback riding, fishing in trout streams and to play tennis, while she has rehearsed and rehearsed. She always could dance, but she was a little out of practice and needed a few lessons to limber up her muscles. They tell me this Belcher School has made grand dancers of some of our well known stars.

* * *

A Line Or Two:

Torch-singing is Bobbe Arnst's middle name. Perfectly logical, then, for her to have such a role in the picture, "The Torch Singer." B. P. Schulberg, who through this column, asked for two real spies to serve as technical directors of "Reunion," a war picture, has received thousands of applications. "I am convinced," he said, "there were more smart than soldiers in the World War."

* * *

Snapshots of Hollywood:

HELEN HAYES reported on her way to New York to talk over a stage play; she is yearning to return to the footlights; her mother from Washington has been visiting her; ADRIENNE AMES, fingered on one side by BRUCE CABOT and on the other by her husband; these three and MRS. AMES' two sisters dining at Al Levy's tavern; the whole party attending the fights at the Hollywood stadium; ANN HARDING and a very attractive youth dining at the Vine Street Derby; ZITA JOHANN and Hollywood's richest bachelor, PHIL GOLDSTONE, engrossed in each other at the derby; rumors are that PHIL, heretofore impervious to feminine charms, has fallen hard for JOHANN LEIF ERICKSON; Lanky doorman at Loew's State with a voice, discovered by TED FIO-RITO, is going into the movies; he makes his debut in a short with FIO-RITO; NORMAN TAUROG suddenly taken sick, rushed off the set at Paramount and taken home; the WATTERSON ROTHACKERS entertaining in honor of DORIS KENYON and ARTHUR HOPKINS. That's all today. See you tomorrow!

Presto and pronto—That was Janet Gaynor herself the news photographer caught sight of, as he was about his task of getting real life action pictures of the movie stars, to brighten this page. She was laden with bundles. So the picture man was quick on the camera trigger—click, and the wistfully sweet lady of the cinema was captured right on the spot, bundles 'n' all. She told him shopping was one of her joys of living; another, hunting antiques—buying furniture in general. Janet tomorrow leaves the Coast for a visit in the East, she told the camera man.

Film Stars Find Recreation in Taking Pictures of Pals

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Universal Service Motion Picture Editor
Hollywood, July 23.

How do the film stars spend the summer days when they are not perspiring from the intense heat of the studio incandescents? Not going to late parties or in romantic rendezvous with some other woman's husband or some other man's wife, as the recent stories out of Hollywood might indicate.

The stars "shoot" each other and develop interesting, informal poses that the fan magazines would give a fortune to own. Ben Lyon's pictures of his friends are famous. Charles MacArthur and Helen Hayes could vie with professional photographers in taking and developing pictures. Warner Baxter's busy camera has caught some interesting scenes on the popular Malibu Beach. Miriam Hopkins, Stuart Erwin and King Vidor had a regular daily battle to see which could photograph the most unusual angles of the sets while they were filming "Stranger's Return."

* * *

Antique Buyer

Popular as the camera rage is at the moment, Janet Gaynor couldn't be induced to spend her free hours taking pictures. Once Janet is finished at the studio she goes hunting furniture—often antiques for the new home.

John Boles has two between-pictures hobbies. Either he rides a bicycle morning, noon and night or he practices his music. Lilian Harvey spends more time in her automobile than any other actress. Perhaps that is why she, with the exception of Gary Cooper, has the "loudest" car in Hollywood.

Will Rogers, surprising as this may sound, comes to the 20th Studio for luncheon whether he is on or off a picture. Maybe he finds ideas there for his wisecracks. When he isn't at the studio he can usually be located exercising his horses.

* * *

Clara Bow Cooks

The yarns of Clara Bow's skill as a cook always seemed to me to be inspired by her press agent until I heard first hand that Clara can bake a cake that would win a prize at any state fair. Maybe she was spoofing when she exhibited a coke, baked by her own fair hands, but it's no press agent's idyll that Clara, the moment she finished at the studio, goes to Rex Bell's ranch in Nevada and stays there.

With the exception of her trip to Europe she hasn't been seen in a cafe or a public place in months. Off the record Clara has settled down into a real haus frau. She is terrified of getting her name into the newspapers again and she is such a good girl these days someone ought to pat her on the back.

Clara, too, has the candid camera bug and takes pictures of Rex and the farm. Oh, I tell you, it's the most popular pastime of the moment. Carmel Myers has a trick camera that she learned to manipulate and her pictures are really very good.

"GOODBYE AGAIN" IS MERRY COMEDY

Osgood Perkins and Lora Baxter Head Capable Cast in Premiere at Tremont

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

"Goodbye Again," making a rare midsummer event of the drama in Boston, and laudably brave in facing the heat of the nearby Mall, proved an excellent excursion to the land of laughter, last night, at the Tremont. It is a merry comedy—it philanders along most amusingly, it dips into about all the huskin varieties of humor, is now and then satiric, is sometimes burlesque, and for most of the way is outright farce. Extremely light of theme, its saving graces lie in its shadings of character, and its comic clinic into human conduct and conversation.

The curtain rises. Osgood Perkins is revealed, asleep in one of twin beds, in a hotel room. At one side works his secretary (Lora Baxter). The implications of the play's title are that Mr. Perkins is a lecturer-author, of amative complexion, with a sweetheart in affair, at in every stop of his lecture circuit. The hotel clock ting-a-lings, and Mr. Perkins goes through a hilarious pantomime of the hate-to-get-up, morning-after variety. This sets the sportive pace, and not once during the ensuing hours does the generally farcic tempo let up.

"Where are we?" inquires the late riser. And a moment later, peering from the window, he adds:

"So this is Cleveland!"

And that Ohio city—it might just as easily have been our own home town—comes in for some lively banter thereafter. It has ever been safe showmanship to poke fun at the other fellow's city.

Quickly the theme begins. Among the autograph hunters, neatly satirized, there comes a forgotten "flame," the lady now married, but feeling the glow of the former love.

Though his secretary is undeniably far more beauteous (Miss Baxter is) our conefer herself highly, and very properly, complimented) Mr. Perkins is off to engage in one of his romances. Then traipse in members of the wife's family, finally the husband. Rather a likable chap is he. He sits 12 hours, waiting—in the room, off in a cafe, for dinner, then a movie, the attractive secretary as his companion. There is a round-up later in the hotel room, and the best moment of this second act comes when Miss Baxter notices the Lothario is without his tie, jokes him about it, and suddenly exclaims:

"Your socks!"

It has the subtleness of a master hand, and the surprise and the shock of an action climax.

The third act has all hands assembling for what one might term a legal showdown. The lady has been compromised—he done her wrong," and must not get away with it. The show is now arrived at its big moment of mirth, and it holds up clear to the end of a superbly fashioned last act.

The whole cast is capable, Mr. Perkins has none of the earmarks of the philanderer, but he has art, and buffoonery. So he succeeds perfectly. Miss Baxter bears him capable company. Hugh Rennie as the meddlesome and gabby lawyer, and Leslie Adams, as the genial hubby, are clever thespians, meriting the great applause that came as each stepped from the stage. There's a boy player, son of the stage manager, Aaron Bodenheim, who also appears. And the gentleman who did the "Mr. Clayton" deserves better than the George Spelvin mention. The staging and direction are splendid.

It was a notable night. The audience was large and enjoyed the show. It was the first July drama in a great many years; and though the heat outside was ferocious, it did not lessen the diversion inside. So Arthur J. Beckhard's venture, this mid-summer, may be set down as a brave achievement, and likely to accord him great success.

Speed, Class on Scollay Stage

By HARRIS MORGAN

Eight new acts, all passing muster with the audience, to judge by the applause, make up the Scollay's new stage bill, while the screen features for this week, "Gambling Ship," a melodrama wherein Benita Hume, a clever actress, is torn between two loves and is finally won by Cary Grant. It is a tale of faro and racketeering, with some excellent camera work.

* * *

On the vaudeville bill, Mac Usher is the headliner. This singing comedienne sings a number of hits, all in good voice, with a good deal of stressing by way of pantomime. The house greets her selections applaudsively, registers her as the smash hit of the program.

The Lee and Joyce turn presents nifty dancing. Miss Lee taps away merrily, and Miss Joyce follows with some peppy stepping. A specially good act is that of Granville and Irving, wherein one gets a small sized show within the 35 minutes or more of the troupe is on stage. The dancing of the Carroll sisters is expert, and Granville reveals angles to the ability that made him a musical comedy star.

All to the merry is the Davey act, for patter is even brighter than the skilful juggling. Still more comedy is fashioned by Desty and May, and later by Pinto, Della and Stout, who keep the audience hilarious. Frank Reckless, billed as "flying Dutchman," brings on the speed thrills, which are repeated when the Mendis trio finish up the bill with fast acrobatics.

Esplanade Concert

Rare Picture From Soviet Studios

By LEIGH HARBRIDGE

"Island of Doom," Russian film, on the Fine Arts screen, is a rare picture out of the Soviet studios. So far as we can recall, it is the first Slavic talkie with romantic flavor, and the first out-and-out melodrama we remember since the silent "Village of Sin," made at Moscow. It goes after its theme in typical manner of that land of expert camera technique, where individuals are played down and masses and nature are played up. It is as far from the Hollywood concept as pole from pole.

As treated, the camera work and action surpass in interest the "eternal triangle." By the experiences of lens handling, "Island of Doom" becomes real motion picture.

The Greater Tragedy

JOHN DUFF sneezed and then smiled. He smiled because, for the first time in his life, he didn't mumble, "God Bless You Those words wouldn't be necessary any more now. Superfluous he thought like taking General Balbo on a roller coaster for the thrill of the thing.

John Duff was about to die. He was in the very best of health But death would come in the form of murder. He would be killed within the next half hour by John Duff. Another John Duff. A man who looked and acted like him, but who seemed to be dragging him to the brink of eternity-against his will.

Suicide . . . . . .

He got up from his rolltop desk surveyed the empty desks all around, and walked over to the window. Below, far below, lay one of the streets of New York It looked like a black river, at the bottom of the Grand Canyon

John Duff didn't shudder as he looked. He strained his myopic eyes to see the swarms of people crawling along both sides of the street. Those people, he thought, are alive. They are crawling, working, slaving, sweating, living laughing and loving—for what?

There was no answer. When you come right down to it, he figured, there really isn't an answer to anything. You go through life having a little fun and a whole lot of heartaches, and then—pouf!—stop breathing and your enemies tell the world what a swell guy you really were

For a moment, John Duff felt impelled to raise the window and jump. But he didn't. The window was only 22 floors above the street The roof was 40. No use taking any chances, you know. Might as well do it right

The face he saw was old, and lined. The eyes were still young and very blue. The hair still retained its natural brown, but there wasn't much left of it. As he looked, he smiled again, for he recalled how much he had feared baldness. So much so, that he had allowed a few strands of hair to grow exceptionally long, so that he could comb them over the bald parts.

All that seemed silly now. Trivial. He hurled the mirror onto the floor. It cracked from the center outward, like a star. John Duff looked at it for a moment That's how I'll crack, he thought. Only I won't look half as pretty

He grabbed a pen. Might as well write a last note. Every suicide does that. Why should I upset such a grand precedent, he thought It's a tradition! I can see the cops pouring into this office after it's over, upsetting all my correspondence looking for a motive. And after it's all over, they'll say: "Why, the whole thing was a flop. He left no note!" . . .

Tired with thinking, John Duff looked for a sheet of paper. As usual, he couldn't find any in his desk drawers. He picked up a letter from the top of the desk. He looked at the signature Leonard Lyons. Who was Leonard Lyons? He couldn't recall

It made no difference He turned the letter over to the blank side, and began to write

"All my life," he wrote, "I was a tightwad. I saved and saved and saved. That's all I lived for. Money. When I made enough to retire on, I wanted more. And when that came along, I still wasn't satisfied

"Six months ago, the bubble exploded. Not quickly, like most bubbles. Slowly. Securities, my main investment, declined until they were worth next to nothing Real estate, which I tried to dispose of to save my security holdings, proved a white elephant Yesterday, the bank in which I deposited my cash, failed. Thus the motive.

"Now, I, John Duff am about to leave this office, go to the roof and jump off. And, without any intended lack of reverence, I hope to God that I break every bone in my body"

John Duff signed his name with a flourish. Then, with an ordinary paper clip, he stuck the note onto the desk lamp so that no one would have trouble finding it

Then he stood up, took a last look at the office he knew so well, and walked out. He didn't shake He didn't tremble. His carriage was straight and firm. He closed the door without looking back, and walked down the corridor to the elevators

"Up?" queried John Duff

"Up." replied the elevator boy

The door closed noiselessly

The porter picked his nose while looking out of he window. Then he pushed the brush across the floor again. He liked being a porter. They wanted to make him a window washer, but he told them he couldn't stand height. So they gave him a brush and two dollars less per week

He didn't see the note until he had almost finished his work. The humming electric fan caused it to sway from the desk lamp. Curiosity caused him to read it

The porter read slowly When he reached the end, his face turned a milky white. The brush dropped to the floor. The note fluttered down from his hand. Suddenly, he ran. Ran skidding across the polished floor and out into the hall. He pushed the "up" button The elevator took years coming

The elevator boy could hardly understand him

"Yes yes," he said "I took John Duff up about ten minutes ago Sure I remember He said the office was too hot He wanted some air. What? Suicide? John Duff? Good Lord!"

The elevator sped to the 39th floor. The porter dashed out

"You go back down," he yelled to the operator. "Tell the superintendent. Hurry. Maybe he ain't done it yet!"

The porter dashed up the last flight of stairs. At the top was a long iron ladder which ran to the pebbled roof. With racing heart he climbed it rung by rung

As he reached the top he almost fainted. For there, lying right in front of him, was John Duff. The face was contorted with pain. Quickly the porter noticed that the man was still breathing He buckled down on his knees and started rubbing Duff's wrists

The suicide opened his eyes The porter grinned with gladness

"Gee," he sputtered. "I'm so glad that you didn't—I mean it's swell that I got here—what happened?"

John Duff moaned

The porter continued to rub his wrists.

"What happened, Mr Duff? How did it happen?"

The suicide stopped moaning

"What happened?" he repeated "What happened? Why I was coming up that ladder, and fell over the top rung and sprained my ankle. For God's sake, man, will you get a doctor? This may be serious!" . . .

Listen World---the Fuss About Mothers

NOW THAT it's over, I can say —

MOTHERS' DAY ALWAYS MAKES ME MAD

Elsie Robinson

It makes me mad because I [illegible] a mother My boy has gone now, but for twenty-one years I worked for him and loved him beyond all expression. I was a good mother.

BUT I DON'T WANT ANY MEDALS FOR IT

I was a good mother because motherhood was my highest joy and duty I had my boy because I wanted him. He owed me nothing when he came into this world. And I remained his debtor all his life

The years we spent together were [illegible] with poverty and pain and the dread of approaching death Yet, in spite of that, motherhood was such a great adventure that the very memory of it enables me to walk proudly and gratefully through these empty days

WHY SHOULD I EXPECT REWARDS FOR AN EXPERIENCE LIKE THAT?

Why should the world set apart a day to honor women who have already known the deepest honor, the most exquisite delight that life can bring?

However, I wouldn't outlaw Mothers' Day merely because the gratitude's on the wrong side of the ledger. Love's a great thing. We can't have too much of it, whoever expresses it. But the second reason for Mothers' Day burns me up completely. Namely—

Childbirth, of course, is a tough ordeal. But it's no tougher job to have a baby than to support one

It is no more remarkable or righteous for a mother to toil and sacrifice than it is for a father

But do you hear anyone shooting off fireworks just because Father was a Good Papa? No you don't.

There is, to be sure a Father's Day. But that's just to use up the Christmas neckties and the rest of the carnations.

BUT DOES ANYONE REGARD A MOTHER'S CHORES AS "JUST HER DUTY?"

As, for example, me, myself. Here I am, writing about Mama as if she were just a Regular Human and should perform her job as such And what will happen? By the next mail, 35,985 Made Mamas will have written to the editor and demanded a Public Apology. They will have accused him of Conspiring To Ruin The Homes Of America—and of being, probably, in the pay of the Russian government. So somebody Ought To Do Something About It In Washington

Not all the Mamas will do this. There are plenty of women who are as good, if not better, sports than the gamest men. They'll grin and cheer; but the cheers will be lost in the tumult of snorts and snivels. All right; let 'em! I've only one life to lose, and this is a swell cause. If I join the bread line tomorrow, I'm going to say my say.

I RESENT BEING FUSSED OVER BECAUSE I DID A NORMAL, HUMAN JOB

Not that I mind praise Anything but!

Why, in short, should we treat mothers as we treat naughty or feeble-minded children—flatter and fuss over them for doing those things which normal children are expected to do as a matter of course?

By that very flattery, we belittle motherhood and condemn mothers, if the poor saps but knew it!

Rippling Black Lace

This two-piece evening dress tends towards straighter lines, with crisp flaring details, as described in the accompanying article.

First Signs of the Coming Silhouette

By looking carefully at the newest arrivals reaching fine shops, it is easy to see the point of the full fashion story. From year to year, in every new collection there's one focal point which determines the season's mode—usually it's the waistline sometimes skirt lenght and in the last few seasons, it has been the shoulders

However, this fall the waistline and skirt lengths are fairly well established, so now sartorial interest settles acutely on the details at the shoulders and at the hems. Shoulders will be "high, wide and handsome skirts, tubular and straight with fullness placed very low, if anywhere at all

For evening, there are two outstanding fabric trends. First smoother surface. (This is true incidentally, even of knubby tweeds and woolens for street wear. They seem to bury their naps). Second, stiffer, more lively fabrics, like taffetas, failles bengalines, moire (revived) and novelties like canvas, ottomans and silk alpacas. Shining satins and taffetas—both printed and plain, often lacquered, are worn for daytime as well as in the evening. Chiffon is startlingly lovely when lacquered for evening wear

Black, a favorite color of yesterday standing, is stronger than ever -more than 50 per cent in most new fall collections. Cocktail hour dresses with long or short tunic tops are important developments. Two-piece evening dresses like the rippling black lace gown sketched, tend towards straighter lines, with crisp flaring details at the shoulders and hems Often, as in this example, it is hard to tell just where the tunic ends. If you look carefully at this dress, you'll be surprised to discover that the tunic stops at the second tiny flounce at the hips

Besides adding new fashion interests, this two-piece arrangement is a handy one. It allows one to make several costumes from the first foundation. A white lace top, for instance would be charming with the black lace skirt. Black and white are tremendously smart again

Ropes of pearls, or staggering amounts of sparkling rhinestone or diamante jewelry as well as jeweled white satin evening purse and gloves, would make this a perfect costume for an early fall evening. Clips in the ear are the newest rhinestones jewelry story. They're no larger than the tip of your little finger, but because of this, terribly chic

Barbara Holmes is waiting for a visit from you. Go and have a chat with her any time from 9 a. m. to 5 p. m. on the fourth floor of the R. H. White Co., at the Free Rental Bureau, operated under the direction of the Boston Evening American and Sunday Advertiser.

KNAVE'S GIRL

By Joan Clayton

THERE, THERE, my dear, dry your eyes. I shouldn't have been so short with you. I know you did your best this evening Put my snappiness down to nerves and natural cussedness After all it was a long session"

She allowed him his own interpretation of the tears. She regarded him bleakly, looking all at once so wan so desolate so pathetically young, that he said with bracing cheerfulness

"I know you're worn to a frazzle, youngster. Maybe after the Blair tournament next week we can arrange for ten days at Palm Beach, or a cruise to Bermuda if you'd rather"

"Then, we're entering the tournament?"

"If Reuben Blair accepts our entry," Julian paused, said thoughtfully, "I don't suppose he will dare keep me out but he would if he could. That man hates me like slow poison. He's been hoping for years to catch me cheating some night"

"Why?"

"A matter of dollars and cents and pride, Patricia. The old fuddy-duddy owned the bridge racket in this town until my appearance on the scene. What a shock that was to Mr. Blair!" Haverholt chuckled softly, continued, "Until I arrived Blair had the country fooled with bridge of the vintage of 1905. He handed down weekly pronouncements on the finer points of the game, he sold thousands of books that could have been written by a child of three, his imbecilic magazine was bought by bridge players all over the world. Mr. Blair, in short, was the oracle of contract. It nearly broke his soft, sweet old heart to be shown up by a rank outsider, by someone not even mentioned in the social register. He had always believed that the game of bridge belonged to ladies and gentlemen."

NOT INTERESTED

"But, you are a gentleman," Patricia protested, not really interested

"A highly debatable point," remarked Haverholt, grinning "I'm afraid I'll always look like a species of scoundrel to the boys who were born to high-hats and tail coats and long dull family trees That suits me. I'm something that any of them would give their eye teeth to be—the greatest bridge player in the world mademoiselle"

He bowed

"Have you ever played against Blair?" asked Patricia, weary to death of his bragging

"Never, and I never will so long as he is in his right mind. Blair very wisely gave up tournament bridge the year that I won the Eastern championship Said the [illegible] had come to give the younger [illegible] a chance. There's a [illegible] for you Patricia.

Patricia did not [illegible]. She hoped [illegible] that [illegible] the coming [illegible] would not [illegible]. Perhaps then she might have a breathing spell, might [illegible] her was back to peace and [illegible] and clear [illegible]

The following [illegible] Haverholt received [illegible] acceptance of [illegible] himself and Patricia Haverholt [illegible] Reuben Blair Cup [illegible]. It was impossible for the girl [illegible] play Haverholt had set his [illegible] upon winning the cup [illegible] hands of his [illegible] could not let him [illegible]

The night of Pat[illegible] test found J[illegible] usually so calm and [illegible] a state of extreme ten[illegible] first place he criticized [illegible] Blue was an unlucky [illegible] him nervous [illegible]

BECAME ALERT

"Isn't it bad luck to change?" queried Patricia innocently, "It might make me nervous to change

"Do you think so?" he asked, instantly alert and troubled and serious. Then, he saw she was laughing. He laughed, too, termed himself a superstitious idiot, but nevertheless insisted upon the change "And, hurry, please, we must be there at eight-thirty promptly."

Presently long before eight thirty Patricia drifted down the stairs wearing the gold frock long tight fitting, infinitely becoming to her hair and skin. Haverholt eyed her proudly contentedly

"If they gave the cup on looks, Patricia, you'd win it hands down."

"Those are strong words, my friend," said the girl, dimpling.

"Not a bit too strong and you know it, you vain youngster," he returned, his dark, handsome face brightening

All the way to the Hotel Winster he discussed bridge This was her first tournament She must remember that tournament play was different No chances tonight no grand slams, unless she held thirteen cards in the same suit and then she must try to get a double.

"Try to trap your opponents into a double whenever possible, Patricia. It may mean the difference between the high and average on a board."

"Must we get high on every board," she asked, feeling a growing and responsive nervousness.

"By no means. Don't try any gambling bids tonight whatever you do. If we can get high on four boards and average on all the rest we'll be way ahead of the players who try to force their cards. There is little luck in duplicate, remember that."

She became more and more subdued. Haverholt had determined to win tonight. If he lost it would be her fault, hers alone.

Five Dollar Prize Recipe for Tuesday

MRS. IRENE DESMOND
38 Putnam Ave, Cambridge, Mass.

MEXICAN RICE

- 1 cup diced bacon
- 1 cup rice
- 1½ cups tomatoes or three large ripe ones.
- 1-3 cup finely sliced onions
- ½ teaspoon salt
- 1 teaspoon chili powder
- 1 quart water, boiling
- 2 hard-cooked eggs.

Cook the bacon in a saucepan. Wash the rice thoroughly, drain and add to the hot fat. Stir occasionally and cook until the rice begins to color. Add the tomatoes, onions, seasonings and chili and cook for ten minutes, stirring frequently. Add the water, cover and cook slowly until the rice is tender and the liquid is absorbed If necessary add more water to prevent the rice from burning. When ready to serve garnish with the quartered hard cook eggs

Fruit Basket Motifs

By LAURA WHEELER

It is not enough nowadays to have [illegible] accessories practical—they must harmonize decoratively with their use. What then could be more fitting, in the modern sense, than fruits on all variety of household linens?

Teacloths, luncheon sets, scarfs, sherbet doilies, napkins—from the tiniest to the 12-inch size—all are enhanced by these decorative and colorful fruit motifs that are done in the simplest of embroidery stitches.

Pattern No. 498 includes two baskets 6¼ inches square, two corner motifs 3¼ x 4½ inches, six different motifs and their opposites, ranging from 1¼ to 2 inches, illustrations of the stitches; color charts; suggestions for arranging the motifs on various linens and yardages

Send 15c for this pattern to Boston Evening American Needlecraft Dept., 82 Eighth Avenue, New York City.

Lost Her Double Chin

AND HER PROMINENT HIPS

This woman writes: "I have a hearty appetite and always stay at 156 lbs. Read her letter She is one of the thousands of women who have Kruschen Salts to thank for the loss of a load of unhealthy fat

"I am 49 years old, 5 ft. 5½ in in height, and was 190 lbs. when I started taking a level teaspoonful of Kruschen Salts every morning. I went slowly down in weight—some weeks 2 lbs., others just 1 lb., until I got down to 156 lbs. I have never felt better in my life than I do now and I feel so much lighter and feel years younger. There's always somebody saying to me that I look about 35 or thereabouts. My measurements are below

	Before		After
Bust	43 ins.	Bust	38 ins
Hips	44 ins.	Hips	39¼ ins
Waist	33 ins.	Waist	28 ins

"Also I had a double chin before taking Kruschen but not now. I have never dieted except once during the time I was taking Kruschen and I tried eating brown bread, boiled eggs, no potatoes or fat meat for a week or two. I got myself down to 151 lbs but as I have a healthy appetite and like to eat everything that's going, I stopped dieting and always stay at 156 lbs. Even better than all this is the fact that Kruschen Salts have brought me through the difficult period of life without even so much as a headache."—(Mrs.) W J

Try one-half teaspoonful of Kruschen Salts in a glass of hot water every morning—Cut down on pastry and fatty meats—go light on potatoes, butter, cream and sugar—in 3 weeks get on the scales, and note how many pounds of fat have vanished. Kruschen will give any fat person a joyous surprise

If one inexpensive jar (lasts 4 weeks) doesn't joyfully satisfy money back from any drugstore Make sure you get Kruschen—prescribed by many physicians and recognized the world over as the SAFE way to reduce and at the same time gain in health and physical charm.

"It's a genuine pleasure to recognize the happiness which this museum gives to thousands of appreciative people," says John, "but even in art it is impossible to please everybody. Frequently I hear young or thoughtless folks say: 'I'd rather see a good movie!' I believe that such people are utterly sincere. The fact is that when people come to see these beautiful pictures the people are on trial, not the pictures. The vast majority enjoy themselves completely here."

No Wonder!

In a case before Judge James A. Lowell a libel action is based upon various things said of a man, "thereby causing him great mental disturbance." One of the things complained about was that he was referred to as a college man. Things like that must be proved before being duly stated it appears.

INCOME TAX LAW UNJUST, SAYS BANKER

Widespread and determined opposition is being manifested here against the practice of "jacking-up" of income taxes as the most convenient means of deriving additional governmental revenue.

Organized opposition is suggested to abolish the income tax and substitute some other less iniquitous method of raising government funds.

Wilmot R. Evans

Wilmot R. Evans president of the Boston Five Cents Savings Bank and member of the [illegible] committee of the [illegible] Home Owners Loan Corporation today took a fling at the present tax system.

Probably no act on the statute books," he said, "has created so much irritation and has offered so much possibility for fraud. In England, Gladstone is quoted as having said 'The income tax has made England a nation of liars.'"

Opposition to the income tax method of taxation is steadily increasing in Boston and throughout Massachusetts. As a class, bankers are opposed to the principle of the income tax.

"One very serious fault of the income tax is that the tax is paid by a very small part of the community," President Evans declared today. "In this there is an element of unfairness. In the distribution of the federal income tax there is a further element of unfairness in that the money received—for example, in Massachusetts—is chiefly spent in other sections of the country.

"It is doubtful if 30 per cent of the money collected in Massachusetts is spent in New England. There may be an indirect and ultimate benefit to the people of Massachusetts, but it is surely unfair that the direct benefits of the tax collected here should go to other sections of the country where almost no income is paid.

"Until recently the income tax was reserved for cases of emergency. In 1935 the United States Supreme Court declared the income tax unconstitutional, but by reason of the 16th amendment it became reinstated. From 1913 we have had it as a definite part of our taxation system. It has grown to such an extent that the dangers and defects are more obvious than ever before.

"In practice, in good times, when money is less required by the government, the income tax brings in very large amounts. This is due in part to the capital gains provision. In times of depression, when money is most needed, the income tax receipts begin to fall. In many cases, under these circumstances, men having a great deal of property can avoid paying a tax. When this happens the result is an increased burden on all other taxpayers and this is probably felt more by the laborer than by any other class.

"What the country needs is not more taxation, but less taxation. Economy in the administration of cities, towns, counties, states and Federal government is necessary. By checking unwise expenditures at the source the tax burden would be reduced without the sacrifice of any benefits. If there must be a further tax as a substitute for the income tax, it would seem that a Federal sales tax would accomplish this."

Washington, July 25—Action by Congress to protect the country and misguided investors against the wiles of Wall Street racketeers has been brought a step nearer by the recent [illegible] rise and subsequent crash in security prices.

William Randolph Hearst is absolutely right in his recent editorial denouncing the Wall st racketeers who sell worthless securities to credulous investors. It seems our people have forgotten all the 1929 game taught.

Congress passed a bill—the federal securities regulation measure which is supposed to protect investors by requiring honesty in the offering of securities. But we must go further and pass legislation that will send to jail persons who manipulate the price of stocks without regard to intrinsic value or the welfare of the country.

Washington, July 25 — William Randolph Hearst's appeal for cooperation between industry and labor is right to the point and has my whole hearted support.

The need for such co-operation to make the 'new deal' effective cannot be over-emphasized.

In his editorial, "The Goose That Lays the Golden Egg," Mr. Hearst points out the necessity for a new attitude from both employers of labor and organizations.

I think copies of it should be pasted on bulletin boards in every factory in the country and in every postoffice where millions could see it and read it each day.

THIS IS LIFE

'Strangers Return' Shows What People Want in Their Movies

By ROBERT E. ROGERS

I WAS GREATLY interested to note last week the enthusiastic reception given by Boston's film critics to the new picture made from a novel by Phil Stong author of "State Fair." The picture was released so soon after the publication of the book that one suspects it was sold to Hollywood before a publisher had a chance at it. It may even have been a manuscript written before "State Fair," but I have heard nothing on that point.

R. E. ROGERS

Like "State Fair," "Stranger's Return" is a story of Iowa farm life. Everybody saw "State Fair," with its story of the kindly farmer all wrapped up in his prize-winning hog, Blue Boy, and of the boy and girl who found their first romances during the week of the state agricultural exposition. In the novel the children went back home to their former sweethearts, realizing that they were farm folks first and last. In the film there was one necessary change made, to give young love at least a 50 per cent break.

Real Insight of Iowa Farm Life

"State Fair" was a genre piece with something of a tendency toward youthful romance, untouched by sentimentality. It was young and fresh and charming, spontaneous in invention and natural in incident and dialogue. This goes for both novel and picture play.

"Stranger's Return" is more complex, distinctly more subtle, and full of an ironic humor which was missing in "State Fair." I am speaking only of the book. I have not yet seen "Stranger's Return" on the screen. It is the story of a grand-daughter who returns from Greenwich Village to the old farm and discovers that she is a real farm girl. Her old grandfather is in the hands of some distant kin who would like to get him declared incompetent to manage his affairs. By feigning a mental breakdown he outwits them, turns them out, and sees to it that Louise will inherit the estate.

Beside the charming pictures of Iowa farm life, there is an oblique and pawky humor throughout the book. Apparently your true Iowa farmer never speaks but in terms of affectionate abuse, sly exaggeration, and direct but friendly insult—perfectly well understood on both sides. This makes the dialogue of the book unique in my recollection, and I am wondering whether Hollywood has been able to transfer that quality to the screen. There is a highly intelligent cast and I hope for the best.

But what interested me chiefly was the recollection of a clipping seen a couple of months ago from Variety, the weekly encyclopaedia of the show world. It dealt with surveys being made of the small town picture theaters in America and their tastes in film entertainment. Mr. Robert H. Brown, who made the survey, is of the opinion that Hollywood badly misjudges what the small towns want.

And what the exhibitors are yelling for is more "State Fair." Cram all the sticks don't want sophisticatsos. The Garbos and Dietrichs are so much baloney to the small towns. And they always will be."

Even Arliss Fails in the Sticks

That is why the swift production of "Stranger's Return" hard on the heels of "State Fair" is significant, and why the favorable press notices in Boston—which differs widely in its tastes from Broadway—are also significant. If Hollywood only were to take the lesson to heart it might mean a new kind of writer and a new kind of director, and fewer plays which bear the stamp of the Broadway columnist upon them.

A manager down South, says Variety, was commenting on his latest George Arliss picture.

"Arliss is a great actor. He has talent and I could enjoy him eight times a day for weeks, but I'm not running this house for my own entertainment. Last night we had all the high-brows in town here to see the picture, while the opposition house had all the working class. If I had all the high-brows in three towns of the size of this I still wouln't make money."

Perhaps that is why Hollywood has been trying Arliss out in American roles, overall parts, but to little effect. Mr. Arliss may keep his monocle and wear khaki pants, but he still can't talk American or behave like anything but a rather subtle and intellectual gentleman of English extraction. Like asking Cagney to play an Oxonian!

"If producers would put themselves in the place of store keepers and farmers when making pictures they would improve by standing in the sticks."

Some of the details are suggestive. The following kinds of pictures are not drawing in the small towns: Westerns (Done to death); tragedy (Farewell to Arms); raw sex or sophisticated sex (Ex-Lady and Cynara and Tonight Is Ours); high comedy (The King's Vacation); pictures with marked foreign back ground (Cavalcade); and the old tropical horror melodrama (Kongo).

City Folk Like Heart Throbs, Too

On the other hand they eat up State Fair and natural homey stories about folks, which are the rarest thing on the screen. In this class belong also, I suppose, "If I had a Million" and "Little Orphan Annie." They like sensational musical shows like "42nd Street" and "The Kid from Spain." They like the Fu Manchu-Sherlock Holmes kind of thing. They love rough comedy like "Hot Pepper" and Harold Lloyd. The only high-brow picture that attracted was "Strange Interlude," partly because of its tremendous publicity but more because of Shearer and Gable.

And they won't go to the pictures at all on Thursday nights! The manager might as well shut up shop.

Vaudeville is coming back. Something is needed to draw folks into the theater since the kind of films Hollywood insist on making no longer appeal.

I doubt if Hollywood with its present set-up has the intelligence or talent to make many films like "State Fair," which was a natural. They need a new breed of writers and directors. If they can find them, and let them alone to do their stuff as they want to do it, we may have less of the varnished, dress-suit, modern furniture hokum, and more pictures that tell the truth about the way most of the folks in the States live and the problems that interest them.

If Hollywood were to take the Costello case for instance, and refrain from putting the whole cast on Park ave. and into evening dress, keep the terribly actual middle-class atmosphere of the thing, it might be very impressive.

Even if we don't live in the sticks, we have a good many of the same tastes. This week, for instance, we are looking forward to "Peg O' My Heart," homely sentiment with a brogue.

CAMBRIDGE TO RAISE DOLE ALLOWANCE

Council First to Follow Plan Urged by President

Rise in the cost of food was given today as the reason for the passing by the Cambridge City Council of an order requesting the board of public welfare of that city to increase welfare aid by 10 per cent.

The order is believed to be the first of its kind since impetus was given to President Roosevelt's program for industrial recovery. The council has no power to put the proposed increase into effect as far as the welfare disbursements are concerned.

POLICE FACE PROBE

However, the order was passed by the council at its meeting last night to be forwarded to the welfare board for consideration.

The council also passed an order creating a committee to investigate police and fire protection in the city. Complaints have been made that both departments are undermanned. A special investigating committee of the council also reported that charges by Cambridge residents against Fire Chief James Casey and his rescue company that they were negligent in their efforts to revive a drowned boy were unfounded.

The council, by an eight to five vote, passed to a second reading the second attempt of Mayor Richard M. Russell to consolidate municipal departments. This attempt was in the form of an ordinance to create a division of public safety

ISLANDS FACE OUSTER

At the close of the meeting, Council President John J. Foley announced that a public hearing would be called Sept. 19 to consider the North Cambridge safety island problem. Since their installation four years ago the safety islands have figured in exactly 308 accidents

In a few cases the city has collected for damage but in the majority of cases, nearby garages have done most of the collecting. Present plans call for the removal of nine of the islands with a lifting of restrictions on motorists driving to the left of them

Divorcee Now

Mrs. John C. Curtin of Brookline, whose husband was granted divorce today in Dedham. She was rebuked by judge at one point in hearing for making faces at her husband. She is given custody of their five-year-old son.

"I'm used to them," Curtin replied in excusing his wife's actions, but she was threatened with being evicted if she made any more faces.

Mrs. Curtin had a cross-suit against her husband, also charging unfaithfulness and cruelty, but it was not upheld. She was described in court by a nurse witness who attended her at one time as a mother whos wore at her young son and who had taught him to swear back.

HERE ARE RULES GOVERNING FAIR TRIP

World's Exposition Competition Is Open to All New England

1—Any boy or girl between the ages of 8 and 12, inclusive, is eligible, except that no boy or girl, any member of whose family is an employe of the Boston Sunday Advertiser or Boston Evening American, may enter the competition.

2—The competition to select the "Typical New England Boys and Girls" opened July 23, and all entries must be made and photographs submitted before midnight Monday, August 21, at which time the contest closes. Winners will be announced in the Boston Sunday Advertiser of Aug. 27

3—All photographs submitted must be accompanied by a correct and complete identification. For this purpose it is suggested that the coupons printed each day be used to accompany the photographs.

4—No photograph can be returned. This must be thoroughly understood.

5—All photographs should be addressed to the "Boy and Girl Editor, Boston Sunday Advertiser and Boston Evening American, P. O. Box 1617, Boston, Mass."

6—Children submitting photographs should be careful to give the name of the school which they attend, public, private or parochial; the name of the principal or teacher, grade, name of parents in full and correct street address as well as the name of the city and state in which they live.

7—The judges, whose decision will be final, are Cyrus E. Dallin, internationall known sculptor, Patrick T. Campbell, Superintendent of Public Schools in Boston, and Mrs. Eva Whiting White, social and civic leader.

8—The boy and girl selected by judges as most typical of New England children, will, with their parents, be guests of the Boston Sunday Advertiser and the Boston Evening American on an eight day tour which includes a visit to the Century of Progress Exposition at Chicago, with all expenses for parents and child paid by these newspapers.

9—The 12 children, six boys and six girls, selected by the judges as being next in line, will be awarded $100 each, this cash award being a gift from the Boston Sunday Advertiser and the Boston Evening American.

10—There are no votes to be cast, nothing, in short, to do except to mail your photograph as soon as possible, correctly identified, to "Boy and Girl Editor, Boston Sunday Advertiser and Boston Evening American, P. O. Box 1617, Boston, Mass."

11—The Boston Sunday Advertiser and the Boston Evening American reserve the right to make any changes deemed necessary, in their opinion, in any or all of the above rules.

12—Each participant upon sending in a photograph and filling in the Entry Blank automatically agrees to be guided by the rules of this competition and to accept as final the decision of the judges.

With the prospect of a [illegible] the doing away with the feature of Progress Exposition [illegible] and the Edson Sunday Advertiser, and with the additional [illegible] of 12 prizes of $100 each, [illegible] the "Typical New England Boy and Girl competition" announced in both papers, has been greeted in more than expected fashion.

Attracted by the unusual prize offered [illegible] by the simplicity of the [illegible] attached to the competition, which [illegible] is necessary only to send in a photograph of the boy or girl entered, scores of photographs of typical New England children were received yesterday at the desk of the Boy and Girl Editor of the Boston American and Boston Sunday Advertiser.

EVERY PHOTO FILED

Not a few of these photographs appear on this page today, merely to give an idea of the type of photograph submitted. Each photograph will be carefully labeled and filed for later inspection by the committee of judges. This includes three of the best known Boston [illegible] Superintendent of Schools Patrick T Campbell, Mrs. Eva Whiting White, noted social worker and Mr Cyrus Edward Dallin, internationally known sculptor

Pictures just such as these are desired—but they must be clear and easy to reproduce. No fancy touches are needed, no artistic photography. Remember it is the typical boy and girl, their parents and the home around the photograph, the better the chance of winning one of these great awards

OTHER PRIZES LISTED

Six trips to the World's Fair are included, for the boy and girl selected as "Most Typical of New England Children" will be allowed to take the parents of each with them on this great trip, with every expense taken care of and with $50 additional for spending money at the Fair

Then there are the other prizes, 12 more, of $100 in cash for each of the next 12 boys and girls chosen from their photographs.

"One of the entries today, wrote a neat little note to accompany her photograph, saying, "my father and mother say they never heard of such a generous offer, such a marvelous competition. I think it is wonderful that the Boston American and the Boston Sunday Advertiser should promote such a competition." This young woman is but 12 years old but she has a keen appreciation of this competition.

JUST SEND A PHOTO

Use the entry blank printed on this page, fill in correctly and mail it with your photograph to the Boy and Girl Editor P. O. Box 617, Boston, Mass. That's all there is to it, no work, no effort, no money, nothing whatever for you to do. Send your photograph, the editor and the judges will do the rest.

And how happy 24 boys and girls in New England are to be when the contest ends on August 21. All entries must be submitted before midnight of that date and the award winners will be announced on August 27

Beer Shop Manager Robbed at Gunpoint

Held up at revolver point by two men masked by handkerchiefs, Fred Corcoran, night manager of a beer shop at 200 Blue Hill ave., Roxbury, was forced to a rear room early today and $23 was taken from his pockets, besides $5s from a cash register.

The men then backed out of the shop, telling Corcoran they would shoot him if he made a false move. They escaped in an auto.

Woman, 99, Dies at Home in Salem

Mrs. Rebecca Manning, 99 one of the oldest women in the State, died at her home, 34 Dearborn st, Salem, today. She was a lifelong member of the old Salem community, and lived in one of the oldest houses in Massachusetts.

STABBER FACES DEATH CHARGE

More serious charges will be lodged against Fortunato Scire, of Locust st., Woburn, today as a result of the death of Charles Revelacqua, 28, also of Locust st., at Choate Memorial Hospital of stab wounds sustained during a family quarrel at the home of Samuel Forestier last Friday night

Scire was released in bail Saturday after being arrested on a charge of assault with attempt to murder Bevilacqua. He was later rearrested and locked up on the same charge against Albert Bevilacqua, brother of the dead man

Counsel for Scire claims that the family row was instigated by Albert Bevilacqua. Scire claims he entered the argument in an attempt to stop it. The dead man was also said to have entered the melee in the role of peacemaker.

Student Is Held in Factory Probe

Robert Warner, 27, of Brattle st, Cambridge, divinity school student who was arrested twice by Watertown police, yesterday, for alleged try by trying to "promote a new deal" among tailors in a Coolidge Hill rd. factory, will be arraigned in Waltham District Court today.

He was first arrested charged with passing out handbills without a license. After getting bail he returned to the factory and a short time later was again arrested

1000 in Garment Walkout to Return

More than 1000 workers in the downtown clothing industry will be back at work tomorrow with their demands for wage increases of 20 to 40 per cent practically won, according to Jacob Blume, business manager of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America.

Lilian Is Named

Dr. H. Bertram Lillian, 244 Perry st., Everett, has been appointed assistant city physician of Everett, by Mayor Michael C. O'Neill.

Everything But Fish to Anglers

Without a bit of the braggart about them, three Newton police inspectors proudly displayed the results of a fishing trip today—and an odd display it was Several clocks, watches, a roulette set and some silverware were the result of their trip to Charles River, near the Needham line. The loot was thrown into the river by two youths who feared the possibility of arrest for several breaks in Newton homes. The boys have not yet been arrested.

Wakefield Dole List Is Slashed

Wakefield's welfare list has been cut practically in half within the past four months the welfare department announces. On March 20 there were 320 families receiving aid. There are now but 163 families being aided. In February, the peak was reached, when 361 families were being aided.

M'MAHON FACES WIDOW WITH STORY OF LOVE AND KISSES

DOCTOR IN CLASH INSISTS SHE DIDN'T ASK ABOUT CYANIDE

By WIN BROOKS

wide, thin-lipped mouth worked hardly moved as he talked, to d of visiting the Costello home on Feb. 18 and hearing Jessie, on a phone conversation s someone she would go to see form out in the ruins.

He also testified that she soon Dr. Harris S. Pomeroy was going to buy the grave of her husband in St. Mary's cemetery, remarking with reference to Edward C. Costello her husband's uncle, who is buried there:

"Can you imagine me being buried in that grave with a drunken bum! I'd be sitting up in my grave fighting with him!"

In the cross-examination of Mc-Mahon by Asst. Dist. Atty. Clark, trousers [illegible] said:

"She told me to tell McMahon she had gone down to the police station," he said.

Under cross-examination he could not be brought to say Jessie might have taken the story she gave him for McMahon from her house.

Chief Edward F. Pierce of Peabody police recalled by the defense in a surprise move, admitted Jessie told him.

"I'll agree to an autopsy on Bill's body if there are any suspicions of the cause of his death. I would not gain anything by Bill's death, but instead would be the loser.

'Loved Costello's Finger More Than All McMahon'

With Edward J. McMahon, ex-kiss-and-tell policeman, waiting his call to the witness stand the jury heard today from a line of another State witness the amazing widow's own comparative estimate of the two most important men in her life:

"I think more of Bill Costello's little finger than I do of Eddie McMahon's whole body."

That remark was attributed to Jessie on Feb. 18, the day following Costello's death, by Patrolman James M. Murphy, of Peabody, lifelong friend of the victim, who admitted he had attended a party to persuade Bill not to marry Jessie and that his interference caused a 10-year break in their friendship.

He said he told Jessie of the talk going around about her and Mc-Mahon and that Jessie resented voiced some time before McMahon's confession of a love affair with her as a comparison disparaging to her husband.

New testimony that Jessie had cursed her own father and blamed him responsible for the investigation which ultimately caused her arrest, and a defense victory that defeated another attempt of the state to get the Costello marital relations on the record, featured the early session.

Suicide Hoax Played on Defense Counsel

Frances E. Rafter, Jessie's counsel, revealed before the start of the session that he had been victimized by a hoax—a telephone call from a man who said he was one Robert Lee and had had a conversation with Bill Costello which indicated Costello was inclined to suicidal tendencies. At the address given, no man by the name of Lee was found and Rafter said he was convinced the call was a hoax.

Dr. Harris S. Pomeroy, tall, austere mystery figure of the case, resumed the witness stand this morning and Dist.-Atty. Hugh A. Cregg immediately struck at conflicting answers he gave yesterday, in direct and cross-examination to questions about whether Jessie, on the night before Costello died, asked him about a prescription for cyanide.

He said definitely that she had not mentioned cyanide and admitted that when, in yesterday's cross-examination, he said she had, he had misunderstood the question. He preferred to put it that way than to say he had not heard it, he insisted when Chief Counsel Clark for Jessie mentioned his hearing. He denied having talked to the prosecutors since yesterday.

He was asked again about a remark Costello made to him about a year ago, which the state interested to mean that Jessie had been cold to her husband's affections but after a bench conference [illegible] was withdrawn and the marital relations subject was dropped.

Inspector Murphy, built like a wrestler, said that on February 18, when Jessie visited the Peabody police station, she inquired:

"What the hell does 'Dite'—(Chief Pierce) — want?" She looked into a room, he said, and remarked "that — — is the cause of this'."

Murphy said he asked her whom she meant and she said "my father." Jesie shook her head and whispered to her counsel.

After Jessie had told him, in his visit to her house a short time later, that she thought more of her husband's little finger than of all of Eddie McMahon, she reminded Murphy, he said, that "I had told Bill not to marry her."

Jessie gave him Costello's medicines, he said, and offered him some other medicine which he did not take.

Under cross-examination by Rafter he admitted his altercation with

Jessie Sticks to Same Attire

Salem Courthouse, July 25—Mrs. Costello's much heralded wardrobe has yet to put in an appearance, with the defendant wearing the same black crepe dress which she has appeared in since the opening of the trial.

Yesterday's intense heat caused her to doff the ensemble jacket but, otherwise, her appearance was the same. She seemed somewhat affected by the heat, frequently mopping perspiration from her face. Mrs. Rachel Craig, jail matron, nodded sleepily toward the close of the session, apparently is affected by the stifling heat.

No Mention by Her of Cyanide, He Says

Q.—I asked you yesterday about a conversation you had on Feb. 18 with Mrs. Costello. You told me that during the conversation there was no reference to cyanide. A.—There was not.

Q.—In answer to a question by Mr. Clark you said that Mrs. Costello asked you if it were necessary to have a prescription to purchase cyanide and oxalic acid and you said you did. She did not know that cyanide was asked but not hear it.

Q.—Did you ask you was any reference made to cyanide during that talk? A. There was not.

Q.—Was the term [illegible] A.—It was not.

Q.—You told me of a conversation you had with William J. Costello, in the presence of Mrs. Costello, in reference to their marital relations Do you recall that? A. I do recall the question.

Q.—Will you tell us what was said?

Clark objected and a lengthy bench conference followed.

Q.—Doctor, yesterday during the closing moments of your cross-examination I put this question to you in about the same tone of voice I am now using. 'Was it not when you were writing at the table that Jessie Costello said to you, 'Do I have to have a prescription to purchase cyanide and oxalic acid,' and you answered, 'Yes'? A.—I misunderstood.

Q.—Do you now put it that you misunderstood or would you prefer to say you didn't hear it? A.—I prefer to say I misunderstood it.

Q.—I think, doctor, after you left this court and after you finished your testimony, you went direct to the district attorney? A.—I did not.

Q.—Did you talk to the district attorney? I did not.

Q.—Did you talk to anyone connected with the district attorney's office? A.—I did not.

Q.—You learned somewhere of your answer to that question? A.—Yes, in the morning paper.

Q.—Did you talk to the district attorney this morning? A.—I did not.

Q.—Did you talk to anyone? A.—I did.

Q.—To whom? A.—Mr. Donnell and Mr Ronan.

Q.—They are your personal representatives? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—Did they go to the district attorney? A.—I don't know.

Clark finished his examination and Police Inspector James F. Murphy of Peabody was called Atty. Green questioned him.

Murphy said he saw Mrs. Costello at the Peabody police station twice. The first time was Saturday, February 18. Chief Pierce his son, and Sergt. McHugh were present

Q.—What was said? A.—I said, "Hello, Jessie." She said, "Hello, Jim, what the hell does 'Dive' want?" Then she said: "Is that old ——— in there?" I said, "Who?" And she said, "My father." The chief came along then and they went into his office.

Q.—Were you there? A.—I was in and out.

Under questioning by Asst. Dist.-Atty. Green, Inspector Murphy said he went to the Costello home about half an hour after Jessie left the police station the day after her husband's death.

"Helen Ohrine, Mrs. McDonald and Mrs. Costello were there," he said. "I told Mrs. Costello I was sorry for her trouble and I knelt down and said a prayer. I told her there was some talk about her and McMahon.

"She said 'there's nothing to it. I think more of Bill's little finger than of McMahon's whole body.'"

Defense Counsel Rafter cross-examined Murphy

Q.—You and Bill Costello had a talk shortly before they were married? A.—Yes.

Q.—You met Jessie and Bill standing in O'Shea a doorway and you picked up her hand and made some comment about her not having a ring? A.—I congratulated both.

Q.—No, this was before they were married. Bill Costello got excited at some comment you made [illegible] right isn't it. A. Yes, I said but where the ring was and Bill got excited. I put my foot out.

Q. Did you say when you went to her home the following afternoon, Don't worry. Tom will be straightened out in a few days." A.—I did.

Q.—Did you tell her she ought to get out of town for a few days? A.—I said her she ought to take a vacation

Q.—She said to you, "You know what happened, Bill took McMahon in when he was broke. I took care of his wife and child." She told you that? A.—Yes.

Murphy testified that as he passed Jessie on the sidewalk in front of the police station after the session he heard her say that he advised her to take a vacation "until this thing blows over."

William F. Murray, state detective, next took the stand. His testimony was for the most part corroboration of what Detective Richard J. Griffin told yesterday

He said Mrs. Costello told him she slept in Bill's bed the night he died, although this was not her usual custom. He also quoted her as saying she did not touch the body after she found it lying in the hallway.

Poison Cans Empty in Costello Cellar

Murray said Mrs. Costello, after he had asked her for the containers in which the poisons had been kept led him to the cellar where she took two cans from a shelf. He testified that the can which was marked "cyanide of potassium" contained a few grains but that the oxalic can was empty.

Asked what he did with the poison containers, Murray said he took them to the Peabody police station and turned them over to the chief.

The testimony concerning what happened at the Costello home on the morning Bill died was gone into, Murray's testimony being the same as Officer Griffin's on yesterday.

He said Griffin asked Mrs. Costello if her husband ever talked suicide and she said he had not.

Asst. Dist. Atty. Green finished his questioning at this point and the morning recess was declared

Under cross-examination by Defense Counsel Rafter, Inspector Murray denied Jessie told him Bill had a stomach ailment.

Q.—She didn't use any profanity to you, inspector? A.—No.

Q.—Did she call her father foul names in your presence? A.—No.

Under Clark's cross-examination Dr. Pomeroy said that Jessie asked him regarding both cyanide and oxalic acid, the crafty defense lawyer bringing out that the doctor was hard of hearing. Of this, in redirect, there may be more.

He did say that on the night of February 18 when Jessie visited his office for what he thought no

Mrs. Costello of Duplex Personality Type, McMahon Romantic—Analyses Show

Prof. Georges Henri Le Barr, psychologist, here with analyses the obvious characteristics or traits of the principals in the dramatic trial now being conducted in the courthouse at Salem.

"These personalities contain a clashing and dangerous element in contact," he says. "Under an aura of romance these people were in reality in emotional conflict. It was interesting, perhaps—but it was not love. They are opposites; their relation was an infatuation, which is always a physical quality."

MRS. COSTELLO is clearly of the duplex personality type. She has native and not fully developed charm but has a quality of "steel" or determination in conjunction with a normally affectionate nature. A measure of freedom and self-expression she not only asks but demands. This type regards marriage as due them and are restless under unpleasant or hum-drum conditions in the routine of their lives.

They are adventurous, though practical. Absolutely fearless in defense of what they consider normal rights. Inclined to be impatient and even abusive under stress, but in usual circumstances pleasant and attractive. She has an careful analysis a tendency to act or pose, but is given to spontaneously expressing of opinion and is not governed by conventions if they are contary to a course of adventure, interest or happiness.

This type is normally equipped for quick decision or executive ability, but upon bestowing affections becomes subject to the person admired or loved, giving up the virtue of an able head for the asset of a satisfied heart.

The right side of the human head shows the animal nature —the physical tendencies of the human. The left exposes the spiritual or humanitarian tendencies. Mrs. Costello's right face exhibits impulsive and passionate propensities. The left side shows a leaning to refinement and considerable natural charm, somewhat hampered by a quick temper. She is in no sense a typical criminal type and within the limitations of their background she is a most interesting person.

THIS man is of the romantic type, or the "shirk" personality, as it is called in the modern parlance. He might be amusing and voluble and he has good taste, if a somewhat deficient in strength of purpose. He is equipped to work by his wits rather than his strength and would make a good promoter, actor or salesman if his potentialities were properly developed ego and has confined ego an idea confidence in himself in relations with the opposite sex.

This confidence contributes in making him attractive to women. He has good appearance and style sense in dress and as a romantic personality is inclined to be dramatic, impressive and reckless. He has inactive abilities which when interested or enthused make him an effect personality.

Under provoking or upsetting circumstances he might not be entirely reliable or use judgment which a person of his mental abilities might be expected to utilize. He is fond of good living or luxury, but impatient with slow means of obtaining these boons.

He is a man of good appearance whose potentialities are not fully utilized or developed With good opportunity, clearly understood by him, he might go far on the strength of an ability to please and convince others.

Husband's Attention Repulsed by Widow

It has been testified that Jessie told others her husband went with her on her visit to Pomeroy, that she tried unsuccessfully to have him go into the office with her, and that he drove her to the Peabody drug store where she got the poison.

A phrase which the State interpretel be a complaint by Bill Costello that so far back as spring or summer of 1932 Jessie was repulsing his affection was voiced in repetition by Dr. Pomeroy after strenuous objection by defense counsel and an offer of proof by Cregg. Yet it was no sooner on the record than it was out. Judge Fosdick ruling it to be equivocal and much milder than the State, at a bench conference, had led him to expect.

"A man by the name of McMahon was Dr Pomeroy's first reference in testimony to the state-and-tell policeman whom he was called to attend in the Costello home while McMahon was living there last January. There was at no time in his testimony an indication that he had ever heard McMahon had accused him of sharing Jessie's affections and no question touching upon this story was asked him.

Doctor Endorsed Notes for Costello

Jessie Costello he described as "the best worker" for the Peabody Relief Campaign Fund of which he was the executive chairman. He knew her and her husband intimately for about 10 years, he said although he had only twice treated Costello, once about six years ago for an injury, the second time about two weeks before his death when he prescribed tablets and pills for him, the aim to increase his appetite, the other to relieve a stomach disorder.

Yes, he testified, he had endorsed Costello's note, first for $500 then for $250. McMahon is like to remain on the stand a good part of tomorrow to be followed by his wife and then by Fire Sherry, a fireman who, like Dr Pomeroy, was also on Costello's note.

Dr. Pomeroy was accompanied by two attorneys, S. Howard Donnell, former district attorney of Essex County and J. J. Ronan. When he arrived at the courthouse to testify Up to the time court adjourned his attorneys had not objected to a single question put to him either in direct testimony or cross-examination

Q.—What is your name? A.—Harris S. Pomeroy

Q.—You are a physician? A.—I am.

Q.—How long have you been

Improvised Fans at Trial

By Boston Evening American Staff Correspondent

Salem, July 25—Kern F. Jones, juror number 12, has been the only one of the "12 good men and true" who has not taken advantage of Judge Fosdick's invitation to remove their coats as their "minds may function properly." Jones has appeared in court at all times wearing a coat and vest The vest is never unbuttoned.

* * *

Judge Fosdick extended the press the courtesy of removing their coats through yesterday's sessions The temperature in the courtroom varied between 85 and 90 during the day. Not a breeze stirred through the room.

* * *

The State Police detailed to guard the entrances to the courtroom were allowed to remove their uniform coats only after a telephone request was made to headquarters in the State House.

* * *

The first of the enterprising hucksters appeared yesterday at the entrance of the court house. He sold ice cream to the waiting spectators and did an excellent business.

* * *

S. Howard Donnell, counsel for Dr Pomeroy, was the coolest appearing person in the courtroom. He was attired in a white linen suit Donnell was present to protect the interests of his client.

* * *

When court opened today one row of public seats had been removed to make room for additional reporters New identification cards were also given the press by Sheriff Raymond The new yellow cards replace the white ones issued a week before the trial.

Wilfred W. Lufkin, former collector for the Port of Boston, and his daughter, Edith attended the morning session.

* * *

Dr. William Boos, who will be one of the State's medical experts, brought his daughter Ann and his wife to the trial yesterday. The trio sat within the bar enclosure. It is Ann's second appearance at the trial with her father.

* * *

Women spectators continue to outnumber the male of the species at the trial. The seats which are open to the public were filled yesterday with women who cooled themselves with all manner of improvised fans

* * *

Late in the trial no one of the prosecutors nor the defense attorneys has taken complete charge of the questioning of witnesses. Dist. Atty. Cregg and his two assistants, Charles Green and John Ryan have all called witnesses in their testimony. The defense attorneys have also been spelling each other in the cross-examination.

* * *

Judge Fosdick has been spending his evenings in his West Medford home clipping press accounts of the trial, he revealed this yesterday when he asked artists to get him the originals of sketches drawn in the courtroom.

* * *

Jessie has now slowed down to a walk on her entrances and exits to the courthouse. She walked so rapidly today flanked by two deputy sheriffs, south Mrs. Rachael Craig, bringing up in the rear.

Water Supply Fails at Salem Trial

Salem Courthouse, July 25—Attaches here will probably redouble the available supply of spring water in the courtroom at the Costello trial if anything like yesterday's intense heat returns.

A five-gallon jug of spring water was set up near the jury box, yesterday, but frequent partakings of it by members of the jury and others in the courtroom, reduced the contents to a mere trickle by the end of the day's session.

physician? A—Thirty-three years.
Q—You are connected with the J. B. Thomas Hospital in Peabody? A—I am.
Q—Did you know William J. Costello? A—I did.
Q—Did you know Mrs. Costello? A—I did.

Intimate With Couple 10 Years

Q—How long did you know them? A—Well, I knew them intimately for the past 10 years.
Q—You were the Costello family physician? A—Yes, for the past 10 years.
Q—Did you ever treat Capt. Costello for anything? A—Yes.
Q—When was the first time and for what? A—I treated him for an injury to his hand six or seven years ago.
Q—When was the next time? A—Two weeks before his death.
Q—What did you treat him for then? A—He came to me for something for gas on his stomach and loss of appetite.
Q—What did you give him? A—I gave him some syrup that can be best described as old-fashioned bitters for his appetite. It contained among other things about 12 per cent alcohol.
Q—What else did you give him? A—For the gas on his stomach I gave him some tablets which contained bicarbonate of soda and pepsin.
Q—Did you see Jessie Costello on the night of Feb. 16? A—I did.
Q—What time was it? A—About [illegible].
Q—What talk did you have with her? A—Mrs. Costello and Bill asked her to come to me for a tonic because she was run down and not feeling well.
Q—What examination did you make? A—It was principally a blood examination made by my technician [illegible].
Q—What did you find? A—We found her blood was 60 per cent of normal.

Questioned Doctor Regarding Oxalic Acid

Q—What other talk did you have with her? A—She asked me if it was necessary to get a prescription for oxalic acid, that she needed it for cleaning purpose. She said her father used to get it for her; but she wasn't on good terms with him and wanted to get it herself.
Q—What was your answer? A—My answer to her question about needing a prescription for oxalic acid was "No."
Q—Have you told us all the conversation you had with her? A—I have.
Q—Did you see William J. Costello that night? A—No.
Q—Did you see him after the night, two weeks before, that you gave him medicine? A—I never saw William Costello after that.
Q—And that time six years ago and the night two weeks before his death were the only times you treated him? A—Yes.
Q—When did you see Jessie Costello prior to the night of Feb. 16? A—I saw her several times. Three weeks before I saw her at her home when I treated a man named McMahon.
Q—Had you seen her in your office before Feb. 16? A—Professionally, no. I saw her in my office last year in connection with the Peabody unemployment drive.
Q—You had been to her home three times within a year? A—I had been there a great many times within a year. I treated her mother for four months before she died.
Q—When did her mother die? A—I think it was July 17, 1932.
Q—After that when did you go to the house? A—I don't recall. I treated one of the children and the next time was to treat Eddie McMahon.
Q—Upon whose call did you go to treat McMahon? A—The call came to my office. I don't know who made it.

Advised McMahon to Go to Hospital

Q—When was that? A—Well, I got back from South America Jan. 20. It was just after that, a few days later.
Q—And you advised McMahon to go to the hospital? A—Not at the first visit. He had grippe at first and then had grippe and appendicitis together.
Q—When did you advise his removal to the hospital? A—About a week after I first treated him, when appendicitis developed.
Q—Did you operate upon him for appendicitis? A—I did.
Q—When was that? A—About Feb. 1. I don't know exactly.
Q—Did you call at the hospital while he was there? A—I did.
Q—What time was your first call of the day. A—About 8 o'clock.
Q—When you called on McMahon at 8 o'clock in the morning did you see Mrs. Costello there visiting him? A—Very frequently.
Q—How many calls did you make on him. A—He was there 14 days. I made 21 calls.
Q—How many times did you see Mrs. Costello there? A—In the morning?
Q—When you'd call in the morning what part of the room would she be in? A—In all parts of the room. Sometimes sitting, sometimes standing.
Q—Did you see her hide behind the door? A—Yes, once I saw her hide behind a door when I came in.
Q—Did you say anything to her then? A—Yes. I said "Stop that foolishness."
Q—Did you ever talk to the defendant regarding her financial affairs? A—No.

Gay Wallflower for Each Juror

Salem, July 25—The Costello jury was decked out this morning when they appeared in the courtroom, each man wearing a yellow flower, souvenir of their morning constitutional through Ropes park.

Court Officer Walter Brown volunteered the information that they were "Chinese Everlasting, sometimes called Chinese Wallflowers."

Widow Played Part in Peabody Relief Drive

Q—Ever talk with Capt. Costello about financial affairs? A—I did.
Q—When? A—He came to me about two weeks before he died with a note for $500. He wanted me to be one of the indorsers.
Q—Did you indorse it? A—I did.
Q—You told us you saw Mrs. Costello during the Peabody unemployment drive. When was that? A—It started in March, 1932.
Q—What part did you have in the drive? A—I was chairman of the executive committee.
Q—And what form did the drive take? A—Well, there were subscriptions, donations from city employes, field days and whist parties.
Q—What part did Mrs. Costello play in the drive? A—A prominent part.
Q—Was she a member of the executive committee? A—No, she was a prominent worker for the committee.
Q—You saw her frequently during that drive? A—I did.
Q—Did you know of any trouble between Jessie and Bill? A—I did not.
Q—Ever talk with Bill in Jessie's presence about marital relations? A—I did not.
Q—Ever talk with Jessie about her marital relations as a result of a talk with Bill? A—I did not.
Q—When did you hear of the death of Capt. Costello? A—On the morning of Feb. 17. I was at the corner of Park and Main sts. and Dr. Walsh said—
Q—Never mind what he said. As a result of what he said did you go to the Costello home? A—I didn't right then. I went the next day.
Q—Before you went to the Costello home did you see Andrew Fyfe, father of the defendant, and John J. Costello, Jr., brother of Bill. A—Not before the first visit. I went there again that day.

No Talk Over Cost of Burial Lot

Q—And you went there to see Jessie as a result of your talk with Fyfe and John Costello, Jr.? A—Yes, they told me she was going to bury Capt. Costello in Cedar Grove cemetery and they wanted me to intercede for them to bury him in a Catholic cemetery.
Q—What talk did you have with the defendant about it? A—Well, I told her he was a Catholic all his life, lived as a Catholic and should be buried as a Catholic. I told her not to do anything she would be sorry for later, to accede to the wishes of his family and do what was right by allowing him to be buried in a Catholic cemetery.
Q—What did she say? A—I think she said she'd think it over.
Q—Was there any talk about your giving her $250 for a burial lot? A—Absolutely not.
Q—Did you ever talk to her about the autopsy? A—I did not.
Q—Did you ever tell her that because of the amount of embalming fluid it would be difficult to find any poison in the body? A—(Emphatically) I did not.
Q—Did you ever tell her Bill Costello had heart trouble? A—I did not.

Q—I say your hearing is rather bad? A—It is.
Q—Getting worse as you grow older? A—Yes.
Q—It is embarrassing for you to have people repeat what is said? A—It is.
Q—You are one of the chief surgeons at the Thomas Hospital? A—I [illegible].
Q—And the other is Dr. [illegible]? A—He is.
Q—There is never any rivalry between you, or is there? A—No.
Q—When you said you were [illegible] with Mr. and Mrs. Costello [illegible] you had been very friendly with the family? A—I [illegible].
Q—You liked them both? A—I did.
Q—When you went to tell the Costello home as family physician in recent years Mrs. Costello asked Bill many times to let you look him over, did she? A—She did.
Q—What would she say? A—She'd say, "Why don't you let the doctor look you over, Bill."
Q—On those occasions did she refer to the spells he had been having? A—Yes.
Q—Two weeks before Bill died when he came to your office you had a hard time finding out what was the matter with him didn't you? A—I had to drag it out of him.
Q—Did you make any physical examination? A—No.
Q—In your many visits to the Costello home wasn't Mrs. Costello a kind and loving mother to the children? A—She was.
Q—And a devoted wife. A—As far as I know.
Q—When Mrs. Costello visited you Feb. 16 did you know Bill was out [illegible]? A—I didn't know that until later.
Q—Wasn't it while you were writing at your desk that Mrs. Costello asked you if she needed a prescription for oxalic acid? A—Yes.
Q—You said she was very active in the unemployment drive. Wasn't she one of your best workers? A—She was the best worker. She raised between $1000 and $[illegible].

Usual Thing to Close Doors to Visitors

Q—When a patient is having a visitor at the hospital isn't it the usual thing to have the door closed? A—It is.
Q—Bill applied to you for financial help? A—Yes.
Q—He told you he was up against it? A—Yes.
Q—And that creditors were pressing him from many sides? A—Yes.
Q—Did he tell you he might lose his furniture? A—No.
Q—You didn't know the furniture was on lease? A—No.
Q—When did you endorse the first note? A—Four months and two weeks before he died.
Q—And later when it was renewed? A—Yes.
Q—How much did he pay [illegible]? A—He paid $2[illegible].

AWAITS 'KISS AND TELL' TALE

It is very likely that the smiling widow, Mrs. Jessie Costello, will hear the story of her kiss and tell lover, Edward J. McMahon, the former Peabody policeman, either today or tomorrow. The famous smile was caught by the photographer as Mrs. Costello agreed to pose for photographers at the jail yesterday afternoon. (Boston American photo.)

McGRATH'S TERM NEAR END

Acting Mayor Joseph McGrath today began preparations to turn that office over to Mayor Curley on Thursday following his return from Europe. "Joe" has worked hard in the absence of his chief and was on duty at City Hall for an average of nine hours daily during the past six weeks. It is expected that he will soon make formal announcement of his candidacy for mayor.

MANSFIELD PLANS FIGHT

Atty. Frederick W. Mansfield candidate for mayor, will begin an active campaign for election to that office early in August. He will encounter vigorous opposition on the part of former Dist. Atty. Thomas C. O'Brien, City Councillor Francis E. Kelly, of Dorchester, Congressman Joseph F. O'Connell and Acting Mayor Joseph McGrath, each of whom now claims to be the outstanding Democratic candidate for that office.

SILENT FOR TEN YEARS

Rep. Joseph N. Roach, of North Adams, has been in the House 10 years and has yet to make his first speech. An attempt to get him to say something on a bill of which he was in charge of during the closing hours of the House session proved unsuccessful.

HUNDREDS TO GREET MAYOR

Several hundred close friends of Mayor Curley are to leave Boston tonight by steamer and rail in order to be on hand tomorrow when he disembarks from the S. S. Bremen in New York. John J. RECORD ROLL CALL LIST

During the session of the legislature just closed, there was a total of 176 roll calls in the Senate. In 1932 there were but 71 roll calls and only 47 in 1931. Roll calls are the only records the voters have on the way their Senators vote on the various bills.

FIGHT ENDS IN VICTORY

With the signing by Governor Ely of the bill outlawing the so-called "yellow dog contracts" by which an employer binds his workers from joining a labor union, Rep. C. F. Nelson Pratt of Saugus won a fight which he led in the legislature for several years.

LOVE NEMESIS FACES POISON WIDOW IN SALEM COURT

"KISS AND TELL" CHALLENGED

[illegible]

"Let him tell," Jessie's counsel quoted her as saying today when she was acquainted with the fact that he was to take the stand as witness for the government.

[illegible]

"Don't worry about me. I'll face McMahon today and I'll keep my eyes fixed on him while he testifies. Let him look me in the face while he speaks. Just let him. He won't. He won't have the courage. But I will."

[illegible]

HOLDING HEAD HIGH

[illegible]

"I'm going to keep my head up," she was quoted as saying by counsel. "I won't blush. McMahon might make me out to be a woman damned, and after he is through, I will still be a woman."

The greatest crowd since Jessie's trial began a week ago yesterday was on hand today to catch a glimpse not only of Jessie but of the man who squealed once and is to squeal again today.

He already told the prosecution that Jessie made improper advances to him, that she persistently talked sex to him and that together they indulged in illicit relations.

Other witnesses have testified to Jessie's constant, morning, noon and night visits to the dashing former police officer while he was a patient at the J. B. Thomas Hospital, visiting with him behind closed doors and spending most of the day and evening at his bedside.

But Jessie didn't blanche. And when Dr. Pomeroy bared the Costello marital secret and told of Bill's plea to him that Jessie had denied him her love, still she was sphinx-like, a study in inscrutable concentration.

WIFE IN NAME ONLY

Jessie was his wife in name only, Bill Costello told the doctor and the doctor yesterday repeated it to the court softly. Jessie refused her husband her love, the doctor went on.

And in court Jessie likewise denied the spectators an insight into her innermost feelings about the entire disclosure.

She sat as though glued to her chair, interested but unfathomable.

She didn't flinch even while Dr. Pomeroy told of finding Jessie at the hospital at 8 a. m., 14 times when he paid his morning calls on McMahon, his patient, during the two weeks he was confined by illness.

POMEROY WARNED JESSIE

"Don't be foolish," he advised Jessie on that occasion, he said.

It seemed so irrelevant to Jessie's trial of murder. It seemed like the playful prank of a peppy girl, but everything, little or big, must be told by government witnesses in their gradual building up of Jessie's alleged guilt for the murder of her husband, a fire captain.

To the seemingly unimportant testimony, Jessie smiles, amused by it all. To the serious and damaging testimony, disparaging to her character, she reacts more soberly, her flashing dark eyes tense and fraught with [illegible] ence.

From the witness stand through the testimony of State Detective Richard Griffin [illegible] startling revelation that [illegible] man who today [illegible] the worst raking over the [illegible] has received since the beginning of her trial at a [illegible] at the Peabody Fire Station [illegible].

JESSIE'S SAD MEETING

Casual meetings are [illegible] our greatest fate; unwitting introductions, our greatest [illegible]. We live simply, uneventfully, with ordinary activities our daily routine. And then suddenly, for no reason at all, there steps into our lives an inexplicable something to work havoc on our peace of mind and perhaps bring sorrow into our hearts.

She met him casually, [illegible] between them there was [illegible] mutual in admiration and affection.

And of that past, those moments when she gave her all, a woman's love, to a man whom at the time she considered worthy of it, though it was illicit and though it stamped her unconventional and unfaithful,

Street's Head Falls; Legend Is Half Fulfilled — Frisch and Hornsby Feud Comes to Boil As Former Gets Job

By AUSTEN LAKE

Wre[illegible] Street [illegible] of the Cardinals has [illegible] finally fell on his neck and Gabby's managerial head dropped into the axeman's basket, it fulfilled only one-half of the wisemen's prophecy. For there has been a legend ever since Rogers Hornsby was taken back by Owner Sam Breadon, like a forgiving father with a prodigal son that it would only be a matter of months before Rogers would upend Street [illegible]

Now for the first time in his playing career, Rogers is standing by while a teammate is promoted over his head, which fits perfectly with what Breadon predicted when he salvaged Hornsby from [illegible] at $10 [illegible]

To [illegible] Hornsby [illegible] Cardinals at [illegible] Frank F[illegible] appointment is [illegible] storm of [illegible] from Hornsby [illegible] possibility [illegible] likely [illegible] nounce [illegible]

One of the [illegible] curiosities of the [illegible] been the complete [illegible] of the Cardinals [illegible] to their managers, which [illegible] baseball. The [illegible] Breadon once dropped [illegible] Cardinals and Braves play a training exhibition game at St. Petersburg two years ago.

"It isn't the manager [illegible] club [illegible]" Breadon. "One man is like another [illegible] players. With a sure fire system [illegible] the club will [illegible] run itself."

That is why [illegible] Hornsby [illegible] a World Series title and Rogers [illegible] Breadon did not hesitate to ship him out of town; or when McKechnie in 1928 won a pennant and lost the series, why Breadon exiled him to a minor league outpost. In six years the Cardinals had six changes in management (Hornsby, O'Farrell, McKechnie, Southworth, McKechnie and [illegible] Street).

St. Louis a Beer Drinking Village, Says Breadon

Breadon openly confessed to me that St. Louis is the hardest boiled baseball town in the country—he called it the Balkans of the game—where its citizenry must either have a front running team or they will keep their cash tied in their handkerchief.

"It's a beer drinking, picnicking village," he said, "and the people would rather go out and loll on the turf at Forest Park when they have an afternoon off than spend a dollar to watch base[illegible]"

I still remember the barrage of seat cushions that St. Louis fans scaled at the back of the visiting pressmen's necks some years ago, when a doubtful decision on the field had cost the Cardinals a ball game. The burghers, due to abstract reasoning, seemed to hold the working newsmen accountable for the loss of the game, or else felt that we, as the most available foreigners, offered the nearest target. I know that a well aimed cushion, scaled with terrific force, ruined a neighbor's opus by jamming the keys of his portable typewriter.

As for Frisch I am waiting with some impatience to see how briskly he cracks the whip of authority on the heels of his late fellows. For having been one of the chronic rebels against other managers, he is familiar with the habits of the clubhouse legal department and should be quick to smell out any insurrection. And I'll gamble that he will be just as strict a disciplinarian as he was a snarly dissenter in his earlier day. For the old versified wheeze which follows might have been written for him, instead, if I recall correctly for Mussolini, running thus. "How a minority, seizing authority [illegible] majority [illegible]"

As it is now, the Cardinals have two of the game's leading lone-wolfs in the fold, Frisch and Hornsby, each a super egotist with a vasty, self propelled ambition. So that only one of the two men can stay comfortably on the team if household peace is to be maintained. For it will be no time now before the two men, as headstrong antagonists who have had little in common during the present season, will be in each other's hair. For the sentiment which Hornsby professed toward Street, which led him earlier in the year to profess, "I have the greatest regard for Gabby," does not apply to Frisch, for whom he enjoys an unconcealed dislike.

Frisch Makes Boast, but Fails in the Clutch

As for Frisch, he is a hard bitten, unsentimental sort who believes that he is the cream from the top of the bottle, a temperamental youth with a penchant for backstairs huddles with other sour spirits of the club. And frequently, during the visits of the old Giants and the newer Cardinals to this city, he could be seen on the wicker furniture of the Brunswick Hotel's portico, with a curl of scorn on his lip and a low mutter of criticism for the man who happened to be running the club. I recall that when he was with the Giants in 1927, he told me that he would never play ball [illegible] New York city.

"At [illegible] more [illegible] that," he said, "because I am sick of [illegible] I'm going to join my father in the lace [illegible]"

He [illegible] youngster then than he is now having in the meanwhile achieved some taming from circumstance, and soon afterward he got into a brawl with John McGraw, which caused the old firebrand to trade him out of hand to St. Louis for Hornsby. I waited most of the winter of '27-'28 for some explosive protest from Frank, but none came and the next spring, when the Cardinals went South for training, he went too, like a docile mutton.

It offers a quaint twist in major league history that Frisch, the man who took Hornsby's place as a player in '28, should now find himself in the managerial boots that Hornsby once wore, with Rogers one of his common chore boys subject to his whistle. And what complicates matters is that each is the pet hate of the other, either through causes of jealousy or complete understanding of each other's similar characteristics.

When Street was last in Boston, on June 26, I spent several hours in the Kenmore Hotel apartment, at the end of which I said, as a pleasantry

"Well, I'll see you in the World Series."

"Either there or not at all," said Gabby, from which I gathered that he realized that nothing short of a pennant would save his job.

At the moment the Cardinals were just under the coattails of the Giants for the league lead. But since then they have eased down until they are in the second division. So now Gabby is headed home to his Missouri farm, which he was foresighted enough to buy several years ago, though there is a chance that the Cardinal machine will pension him off in one of its minor league properties.

O. Christner, Ace Hudkins and Les Kennedy. Remember Lee Ramage is only in the filling out stages.

GOOD BALL PLAYER

Ramage is a graduate of San Diego high school where he played second base on the baseball team and running guard on the basketball team. He wanted to play football but his brother Bill, who then was shortstopping for Seattle of the Pacific Coast League, wouldn't let him.

Bill wanted Lee to be a ball player. So Bill signed up under Sam Agnew, the old Red Sox backstop who was managing San Diego of the California State League. And Lee became a mighty sweet minor league second sacker.

Agnew and Pop Hubley had a hot argument as to whether Ramage would stay a ball player or blossom forth into a fighter. Hubley won.

Who do you think was Ramage's first [illegible] opponent? It was a fellow who fought under the name of [illegible] and Lee knocked him out of his brogans. Ramage says Boston is good luck. He may find Tony Shucco of Boston plain p'izon however.

His first big bout was against Les Kennedy, but he wasn't really made as a gate attraction until he beat Ace Hudkins, giving Ace such a licking that the Nebraska Wildcat never has done any ring fighting since.

Equipoise Needs $82,000 to Set New Record

New York, July 25—With the Wilson Mile on the opening day of Saratoga, Aug. 3, his next objective C. V. Whitney's Equipoise today was at the upstate track preparing for a campaign that is expected to carry him near if not to the top of the turf's money winners.

Although heavily engaged at the Spa and the Chicago tracks, the five-year-old son of Pennant and Swinging, holder of the world's record of 1 34 2-5 for one mile faces no easy task in earning the nearly $82,000 he needs to pass Sun Beau's mark of $376,744. Equipoise fifth on the world's list and fourth on the American, has won $294,820.

Except for the $25,000 Hawthorne Gold Cup a weight for age event which will be run either Aug. 16 or 19, the diminutive Whitney speedster's engagements are all in small stakes most of them $8500 or less.

Although eligible for eight races at the Spa, Equipoise probably will not start in more than two or three. T. J. Healey, his trainer, has outlined a program that definitely includes only the Wilson.

DODGERS LET JOE JUDGE OUT

New York, July 25 (AP) — The Brooklyn Dodgers of the National Baseball League today announced the unconditional release of Joe Judge, veteran first baseman who was signed this spring by the Brooklyn team after 17 years with Washington of the American.

Judge was taken on by the Dodgers to plug a gap at first base but after only a few days of play was spiked and has played little since that time. The acquisition a few weeks ago of Sam Leslie from the New York Giants made the retention of the aging Judge unnecessary.

Judge, a native of New York city, was 39 last May and has been playing organized baseball since 1911 when he was signed by the Boston Red Sox. He did not play with the Sox, but was released to Lewiston in the New England League.

Recalled the next year he was released before the start of the campaign and spent the year with Buffalo, which sold him to the Senators for $3,000 and two players. He remained with the Washington team until his release this spring.

Judge has a lifetime major batting average of .299 and played in two World Series with the Senators, 1924 and 1925. His best year was 1920, when he batted .333 in 126 games.

One of the wildest scenes ever enacted on a golf [illegible] way at the Blue Hill Country [illegible] today, where 111 [illegible]

A [illegible] on the course before [illegible] Ford or Dick Conroy arrived Blue Hill this morning and that was around 7 30. Then they began to flock in in droves.

The 19th junior championship will be a screwy affair if some of the kids, who do not qualify, fail to get in at least four rounds for their "buck."

CROSS WANTS SCORERS

Pres. Charles H. Cross of the Massachusetts Golf Association is in need of a few more scorers for tomorrow's qualifying round at Blue Hill. He received a healthy reply from his request for scorers but is still short and is anxious for every threesome to play under the auspices of a qualified golfer.

[illegible]

The Manchester Country Club is undergoing a thorough tuning up for the New England amateur championship, which starts on July 31. Pres. J. W. Epply is determined that Manchester's first major championship will eclipse all previous New Englands, even that held at the Portland C. C. in 1930.

Dr. Joseph H. Carey, South Shore, is now among the golfing elite, for anytime you hole out a brassie for an eagle you are entitled to a "rec" from the most select group. And, Dr. Joe pulled off that flat at the West Hingham course.

Howes Strong Pair

Pharacre, 22-1, Wins Steward's Cup

Goodwood, Eng., July 25 (AP)—Capt. A. S. Will's four-year-old chestnut colt Pharacre by [illegible] out of Sweet Acre today won the Steward's Cup, leading race of the summer, for three year olds and up.

Pharacre finished the six furlong dash a head in front of H. J. [illegible]ton's Old Riley with Mrs. C. L. MacKean's good campaigner, Solenoid, carrying top weight, in third place, three-quarters of a length back.

Pharacre paid 22 to 1 to win while the odds at post time on Old Riley were 10 to 1, and 20 to 1 on Solenoid.

Parker Can Play on Grass as Well as on Turf

Seabright, N. J., July 25. Grass-covered courts fail to worry 17-year-old Frankie Walker, the lad who rose to national tennis fame on the clay-surfaced playing fields of the midwest.

Young Parker is playing this week in the 46th annual invitation tournament of the Seabright Cricket and Tennis Club—his first tourney effort on grass courts. Yet, with all the other seeded stars among both men and women, he emerged successfully from his first round battle and was ready today for another.

"I like grass," the youngster remarked after he had beaten Samuel Lee of Berkeley, Cal., 6—3, 6—3, "and I think I'll go on it just as well as on clay as soon as I get more experience."

The national clay court champion spent last week practicing on the courts of the Orange Lawn Tennis Club to get in trim for this event and said he had learned a lot about it already.

CLUB'S 40 WINS TIE MARKS OF LATE YEARS

By DAVID F. EGAN

The Old Colonel drug out the record book today to acquaint [illegible] thousands of readers with the fact that those up and coming Red Sox have already reached the forty-victory mark in this here season, which is not yet two-thirds along its way.

Forty victories, in case you don't know it, has for years been the ultimate of effort for the Red Sox. And only a year ago they finished up the season with a record of 43 victories and 111 defeats. The year before the figures in the black column were even smaller.

For one so well versed in mathematics as the Colonel, these simple figures have only one meaning. That the Red Sox have to score only three more victories in the 64 remaining games [illegible] to pass the total for the entire 1932 season.

Now the Colonel is pleased to pass on this information, for in his opinion those Red Sox aren't going to be satisfied with anything less than three dozen victories in the remaining weeks of this campaign. The Colonel, who is also an inveterate gambler as well as an expert on baseball affairs (Ed Note—none of that now, Colonel) is wagering that the Sox will finish no lower than the first division.

MARTY GREAT LEADER

He bases this contention on many and varied bits of reasoning. First of all he has an innate belief in the spirit of the boys who are toiling for Marty McManus (Ed Note No. 2—That's no reason at all but a bit of sentiment). Then there's Marty himself, who is proving to be a mighty fine leader of men despite his very youngish years.

Martin Joseph has just rounded into the third decade of his life. But he's gained a lot of experience here and there, and that combined with his die-for-old-alma-mammy fight is keeping those Hose right in the battle day after day, when many feel they haven't any right to be.

But one of the big reasons why the Colonel is optimistic of the future is the fact that those New York Yankees—you know the world's champions—are coming to town this afternoon. That may sound a bit paradoxical. But you can take it or leave it.

In the old days the coming of the Yanks to town, with Babe Ruth, Lou Gehrig and the rest of the entourage of fence busters (Ed. Note No. 3—entourage, indeed) spelled stormy weather for the lowly and spiritless Red Sox.

YANKS CAN'T SCARE SOX

But the old days are no more and those Fenway lads have learned to do a little fence busting of their own. And though the Yanks may be world's champions in New York and around the rest of the circuit, they're just another ball team to the rejuvenated Bostonians.

The Colonel casting his glance back a month and a half or so through the records observes that these Yanks rode into town one pleasant afternoon, with high and mighty demean for a five game series at Fenway. After they had copped the opening game, the first of a doubleheader, they retired to the dressing room to don new caps, the old ones just wouldn't fit.

Then the Hose started a process of deflation that made this depression they've been talking about for the past few years look like a sucker's affair. Four times in a row they smacked down the big fellows, and they haven't stopped bouncing yet.

Those four games started the Sox on the road upward, and put the Yanks very definitely on the skids. They've bounced and slid and skidded for the past month until their big lead went up the chimney and the Washingtons climbed right over them into first place. But that's just the way with those pols, always butting in to a pleasant party.

In the meantime, Red Sox stock began to go up and up and up, and is still on the zoom. A 17-game trip about the western portion of the circuit resulted in 12 victories and five defeats against Cleveland, Detroit, St. Louis, Chicago and Philadelphia.

HOSE IN BEST FORM

The opening of the present home-stay was none too auspicious. But that was because the boys were trying too hard to make good before the folks. They're on the hop now, what with taking Chicago five times in a row.

They've been trying for years to clean up Chicago out there in the middle west. But from the way the Sox tossed mud all over them in the past few days it looks as though it'll never be done.

That sweep brought the Sox wins to 25 in the last 41 games which is just about as fine baseball as you can find in the league.

Although the Colonel has heard various disparaging remarks concerning his ability as a picker of pitchers, he'll disregard them all and nominate Bob Weiland and Llyod Brown as the starters against the Yanks.

Righthanders went so well against the right-handed Chicagoans with Bob Kline, Henri Johnson, Dusty Rhodes and George Pipgras (twice) chalking up victories, that Manager Marty will throw his two best portsiders against the lefty laden Yanks.

Duxbury Crew Wins Third Race

Ties Quincy Sailors for Lead in the South Shore Series

By E. B. SCHRIFTGIESSER

Sailing fast through the rain and northeast wind, Frank Lawson, captain of the Duxbury crew, today won the third race in the series for the South Shore Junior title at the Squantum Yacht Club. On points Duxbury is now tied with Quincy Yacht Club, each crew having 15¼ points.

Quincy finished second today. Cohasset was third, Squantum fourth, Hingham fifth and South Boston last.

The boats were sent over a three-mile course, to [illegible] Peterson's Rock and back [illegible] twice around. Quincy [illegible] weather position [illegible] took a [illegible] by Duxbury.

The breeze [illegible] Squantum Beach [illegible] favorable and the boats which went that way had a big lead when they turned the buoy for the first time.

Squantum which had gone off shore on the first beat tried it again the second time and was last on again turning the mark. Running to the finish line, however Capt. Patten's crew moved up to fourth position.

This Squantum crew [illegible] another of Jack Russell's product. Few [illegible] anywhere take a more personal interest in the developing of young talent than does this veteran skipper who in his time has been a deep-water sailor and railroad man as well as yachtsman.

RUSSELL TUTORS PATTEN

He worked hard with Babe Van Dalen to produce a winner skipper of last year's Squantum juniors and this spring he has been putting Kenneth Patten through a similar course of sprouts. Ken sails with him on the Pawnee; in fact Bob Hale and Jim Bonney, the others of the Squantum boatload, all received their sea experience [illegible] the hard-fighting Indian Class.

When the Squantum boys make a mistake or get a hard break Jack is as mournful as a whistling buoy. When his boys are winning Jack manages to control his elation, having learned through sad experience not to count [illegible] races until the cup is in the locker.

BUD COOK IN SERIES

Quincy has the scion of a famous yachting family in George "Buddy" Cook, who teams with Will Rumney and Joe Nee. [illegible] mother is the sister of Jim [illegible] and when Jim is racing the [illegible] this year she sails his [illegible] boat the Dorchen II. [illegible] commodore of the Quincy Y. C. [illegible]

Duxbury Tied With Quincy

The standing in the South Shore junior yachting series today, with three races sailed and three more to go, was:

	Points
Duxbury	15¼
Quincy	15¼
Cohasset	10
Squantum	9½
South Boston	7
Hingham	6

Squantum, Defending Champ, Capable of Title Win

[illegible] is on hand in both his official capacity and to root for his nephew Bob Finlay, another of the family [illegible] is also in the cheering section.

From a very different [illegible] comes Capt. Frank Lawson of the Duxbury Y. C., runner-up last season. Down in his waters they race the Duxbury Ducks according to the tides, and Frank knows how to work the currents wherever he finds them. His battle with Patten in the second race of the series was a great [illegible] to the finish.

Incidentally [illegible] against Duxbury which the judges disallowed [illegible] difference of [illegible] yachtsmen [illegible] judgment as [illegible] racing rule [illegible] the judges cited [illegible] decision.

GIRL SKIPPER RACING

As in the North Shore [illegible] last week, there is one girl among a crowd of masculine sailors. Connie Barry of the Hingham crew is only 14 years of age, and naturally has not had time to pile up as much experience as her older rivals.

But she sails her boat to good advantage and did a fine piece of work in working from fourth to second place on the reach of the second race. Unfortunately as one of her crew explained later, a backstay jammed when they were on the wind, and they had to stay on one tack so long while the boys were releasing it, that they were practically out of the race.

FAST FIELD IN JUNIOR GOLF AT BLUE HILL

JACK KENNEY — MARTY McMANUS — JACK CONWAY — ROY JOHNSON — MISS BARBARA FORBES

Golfers often fume and splutter, waiting to get past lady players. But there wasn't even a whisper of protest from Kenney, circulation director of the Boston Evening American; Manager McManus of the Red Sox; Conway, famed sports writer of the Boston American, and Outfielder Johnson of the Red Sox when they were delayed as above at Belmont Spring. For Miss Forbes, of Arlington, a member of the Belmont club, made a beautiful picture and a novel one as well when she introduced shorts to the links. So why should even a fussy foursome protest? It shouldn't. And this the above foursome didn't, either. Shorts for golf are bound to become a popular hot weather garb. (Boston American Staff Photo.)

ED PETERSON IN TOUGH SPOT AS TITLE CHOICE

By BILL GRIMES

Among the 144 entries in the 19th Massachusetts junior championship tomorrow at the Blue Hill Country Club, there are 12 players who qualified last year at Wollaston. But the field will be minus a defending champion for the second consecutive year, as Dick Ruggles, Stoney Brae, is over the age limit and must allow his title to slip.

Despite the new restrictions, one caddy from a club, the field is one of the largest in the annals of state junior championship. Although most of the contestants are representatives of Greater Boston clubs there are boys from Cape Ann and Cape Cod, from as far as Pittsfield and an even [illegible] from Worcester County.

Eddie Peterson, Oakley, is the favorite, but favorites mean nothing in a junior championship. Wilfred Ogg and Bobby Hunter were the co-favorites last year [illegible] both passed out of the [illegible] during the semifinals. The previous year, Wilfred Crossley seemed set to romp to a successful defense of his title bout, but he was beaten in the semi-finals by Johnny Quinn. And Bill [illegible] went through to [illegible] [illegible]

Last year at Wollaston, Eddie Peterson went through Ken Dubar of the home club, Bob Warren of Winchester, Arthur Rogers of Scituate, and Wilfred Ogg of Worcester on his way to the finals. Peterson was an odds-on favorite to succeed Bill Donnelly as champion. However, Dick Ruggles by a most courageous exhibition, pinned a 6 and 4 defeat on the Oakley star who was his superior in almost every department of the game.

Of the 12 who reached match play a year ago, Art Rogers and Peterson were the only ones to get beyond the second round. Leo Martin, the 1932 caddy champion from Oakley, Stanley Neptune of South Shore and Frank Sanford of Waltham weathered the opening round, but Martin was nosed out by Fred Baker, Thorny Lea; Neptune took the count from Frank Shields, Thorny Lea, and Sanford was on the short end of a 3 and 2 match with Dick Ruggles.

Jim Phillips, Jr., Lexington, went out in the first round, losing to Wilfred Ogg; Jim McGregor, Stoney Brae, fell before Jack Fleming, North Shore; John Dukelow, Meadow Brook, failed to keep pace with Leo Martin; Arnold Blackwell, Thorny Lea was tipped over by a clubmate, Fred Baker; Frank Janasus was eliminated by Frank Sanford, and Arthur Stone, Sharon, lost to Dick Hayes, Haverhill.

KNOWLES IS THREAT

While last year's qualifiers will have the call in some quarters, it is very likely that some of them will not get through tomorrow's qualifications. There are any number of fine youngsters entered this year who did not come through at Wollaston.

There is Bobby Knowles, who qualified for the state amateur at Worcester and, after defeating Dick Barrett of Thorny Lea in the first round, carried Eddie Lowery to the 18th green before getting his ticket. Knowles acquired some valuable experience at Worcester and he is going to be a tough nut for any of the juniors to crack at Blue Hill.

Then there is little Tommie Quinn, who failed to get into match play last year, but is now playing better golf than when he negotiated the last 10 holes of the qualifying round at Belmont in even 45, under pressure, having used up 45 strokes playing the first eight.

GENE SARAZEN BACK ON ROAD

New York, July 25—With the Canadian open championship as the objective of each, Gene Sarazen and Joe Kirkwood have pushed off on the second lap of the 20,000-mile automobile golf tour they inaugurated last spring.

Burning up highways, golf courses, and each other, they are pointing for the Middle West as far as Nebraska where they hope to meet Johnny Goodman, the Omaha amateur who dethroned Gene as U. S. open champion at Chicago in June.

A high spot of the 10,000 mile jaunt which is being made in the palatial $12,000 de luxe automobile trailer which they borrowed from Col. Henry L. Doherty in Miami, will be their appearance in the Canadian open at the Royal York Country Club, Toronto, August 17-19.

Meantime, if satisfactory adjustment of the dates for the Professional Golf Association championship at Milwaukee can be worked out, Sarazen and Kirkwood will enter that battle. Gene and [illegible] that they [illegible] Denny Shute and Walter Hagen, now in England, cannot play at Milwaukee August 8-13.

Zarynoff Choice to Solve Secret

Count Zarynoff will be a 5-4 favorite to defeat and unmask the Black Secret in the main bout of Steve McPherson's wrestling show tomorrow night at the Arena.

The Count has been made a favorite because of his greater experience. Bull Martin will collide with Man Mountain Dean in the semifinal, a finish match. There will be nine supporting bouts.

MARTY, ROY TIE PAIR OF JACKS

By GEORGE GRIMM

While the majority of the Red Sox team went on a fishing trip aboard the King Philip yesterday, Marty McManus and Roy Johnson [illegible] themselves to the Belmont Spring Country Club, where they played a foursome with John W. Kenney and Jack Conway of the Boston Evening American.

The Red Sox manager and his ball playing partner displayed quite a lot of the fighting spirit which has made the Red Hose famous during the past couple of months, as they came from behind to square the match at the 18th green. Conway and Kenney had gained a three-hole lead on them.

As a result of the deadlock the participants have agreed to play the match off on the first available date providing, of course, there is an official scorer on hand to referee.

Manager Marty and the fast-stepping outfielder, Johnson, thought the scenery at Belmont was beautiful. Doubly so when Miss Barbara Forbes of Arlington and another fair golfer playing a twosome strolled along in shorts.

The courtesy, however, provided an alibi for the ball players during the next three holes to Conway and Kenney, as they both stated emphatically that it was too tough to keep their minds on the match with such beautiful golfers out front.

Martin Wrestles Strack at Revere

Osterville, July 25 — Wianno Yacht Club junior race was a close fray for 10 amateur class starters for first place. Carol Hagerman and Ellen Shafroth in Pelican. Roger and John Kiley in Team and Jack Brown and David Dangler in Doubloon [illegible] the girls beating the boys by 11 seconds.

Primo Reaches Throne by Kayoing Sharkey

CHAPTER XVII

By PRIMO CARNERA

Heavyweight Boxing Champion

(Copyright, 1933, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

For about six weeks I went through the hardest sort of training for my supreme objective—the world's fight championship.

My trainer, Billy Defoe, and American manager, Bill Duffy—both of great fistic experience—will testify that never to their knowledge has a heavyweight gone through more hard conditioning [illegible] I did at Pompton Lakes, N. J.

With a half dozen first class [illegible] partners I boxed on the average of six rounds a day in addition to doing fully eight miles of roadwork daily, much rope-skipping, bag-punching, etc.

Duffy and Defoe surely made me grunt often during the final two weeks. For the first time in my career, save in its early days, I began to complain some about such an enormous amount of dull toil.

PRIMO FIT FOR TITLE GO

But my handlers must have known what they were doing, for at Madison Square Bowl on the night of June 29 I actually felt strong enough to battle 50 rounds if necessary, and was so on edge that I believed I could whip Sharkey, Baer and Schmeling one after the other on the same day.

Mr. Louis Soresi, my chief manager and others kept me well advised as to what the newspapers were publishing about the match and other reports or rumors concerning the same. Most of the noted boxing experts visited my camp and their reports, generally, were favorable.

Towards the end though, after those same critics had inspected Sharkey, their accounts indicated that the Champion was more or less sure to win again. That did not disturb me at all, because my advisors said the same observers had picked Schmeling to beat Baer earlier in the month.

RIGHT SOCK RIDICULED

Their opinion seemed to be that the championship contest would be one between brains and brawn, mind against matter, and so the experts figured it out that the truly smart Sharkey would outwit as well as outhit, the Man Mountain. It was finally reported that, while I showed some improvement in training ring workouts, I was still too clumsy and slow-witted for the Champion who was known to be in perfect shape.

Some declared my right [illegible] [illegible] had [illegible] agreed that my main [illegible] was [illegible] much fun was made of my [illegible]

Eh bien, my answer to such critics came in the sixth round with a perfectly timed K. O. blow—a right uppercut that dropped Jack for good, travelling about six inches and landing full force under his chin. I followed with a swift, stiff left, but the uppercut, I think, spelled K. O.

I did not use that right for much more than defense in the first three rounds. In the fourth I smashed it short to the body when in close, several times, and also shot it towards the jaw, but that only pounded Jack's arms then.

In the fifth I am sure I dug it into the body at least twice with much force, but Sharkey was shelling my head with hard rights, and these caught the public eye better. From the very start of the fourth I was watching, and hoping, for a good right uppercut opening. It did not come, or I did not see the chance, until near the end of the sixth.

KAYOES CHAMPION

When a smashing left hook to the body make Sharkey bob away near the ropes, I saw in a flash a wide-open alley, leading right to his chin. And, as his head bobbed away, I fired the uppercut for a direct hit to what Americans call the "button."

That body hook undoubtedly dazed Jack, momentarily paralyzing his defense. The hard uppercut followup sent him to the floor on his face and thus the Man Mountain—after a little less than five ears—was champion of the world!

Of course, I was never so happy in my life before. I was in a most glorious dream for several hours. In the excitement, why—I nearly forgot the English I have picked up, and answered dressing room questions mostly in my native tongue.

But they do tell me when I crowded in there right after the fight that I let out three or four shouts of "Oh boy! Oh boy! Oh boy!" Bill Duffy said that reminded of the pet words of radio sport announcers.

The next day some of the papers made fun of my gay spirits but you, Mr. Reader, would have been as crazy with joy as I was if you had finally succeeded in your chief ambition after years of hard work and several bitter disappointments.

Picture yourself in a foreign country with but a little working knowledge of its language, and winning a world's championship. You would dance and grin and laugh and shout too. No? Honestly I don't think I did too much of that sort of celebrating.

But I did feel [illegible] happy, and still do for that matter. . . . But more tomorrow of my personal memories of that great night in my life.

De Maggio, Nearing Record, Cracking Under Strain

San Francisco, July 25 (INS)—[illegible] wing the strain which attends a record breaking effort Joe De Maggio returned to his home [illegible] today at Seals Stadium with a grim determination to lengthen his consecutive hitting streak, now at 60 games, nine short of the world record.

The youthful San Francisco outfielder tightened up considerably during the past seven-game series at Sacramento. He was trying too hard, his teammates said, and as a result he barely managed to get baseh its in Sunday's doubleheader—one in the ninth inning of each game and both infield [illegible] which caused much discussion among Senator fans.

The 18-year-old sensation, playing his first season of professional baseball, has nine more games to go to tie the world record made by Joe Wilhoit in 1919 with Wichita of the Western League. Wilhoit once played for the Boston Braves.

BRITISH NET TEAM IN N. Y.

New York, July 25—The British women's Wightman Cup team which battles the Americans at Forest Hills August 4 and 5, arrived here aboard the Britannic.

Of these Miss Nuthall, Mrs. Mitchell and Miss Round have had Wightman Cup seasoning.

Smith, Shaw Take Ekwanok Victory

Manchester, Vt., July 25—H. D. Smith of Glen Ridge and W. H. Shaw of Manchester combined to win the weekly golf tournament of the Green Mountain Boys at Ekwanok Country Club, with a 67 net.

F. C. Robertson and William H. Hinshaw, both of New York, paired for a net of 64, with a handicap of 11, and tied Edgar Boody of Englewood and H. H. Wehrhane of New York, who had an allowance of 29 strokes, for second prize.

HARNESS RACES ON TOMORROW

Salem, N. H., July 25—The 16-day Grand Circuit harness race meeting opens at Rockingham Park tomorrow afternoon. Following so closely after the running meet and with exactly the same setup, racing fans will find little change in the order of activities for this, the longest Grand Circuit meeting on record, and the first in the East with pari-mutuel betting.

The betting will be just the same as at the running meet. Mortimer Mahoney, who supervised the mutuels at the running meet, will again have charge.

Eight dashes will constitute the inaugural day program which Manager Wilson has designated New Hampshire Day. State officials, including Senator Cole, of Rockingham County, will attend.

The racing program will consist of two dashes of one mile each by the 14 class trotters, two by the 19 class pacers and two by the three year-old pacers, and two overnight dashes, one for trotters, the other for pacers.

The meet will run continuously to August 12. Most of America's foremost harness horses are here. And with $75,000 in stakes and purses to race for, owners and drivers will be shooting the works to earn all they can.

TWI CROWN UP IN GO TONIGHT AT WINTHROP

By GEORGE UNDERWOOD

Three cockle-of-the-heart-warming games will be on tap for the fans who like their baseball in the evening, tonight. At Ingleside Park, in Winthrop, the Ingals A. C. and the Somerset Pals will battle it out in a game that will decide the championship of the first half in the Inter-Suburban League race.

While the Somerset Pals are having it out with their rivals at Winthrop, Neponset and the Roslindales will be going at it hammer and tongs on Garvey Field, Neponset. Roslindale is leading its division in the Boston Park League, and Neponset, playing great ball, is runner up.

Olson, Shea Duel

Teddy Olson, the Dartmouth freshman will go on the mound [illegible] probably will be opposed by the veteran Jim Shea, who, like wine, seems to improve with age. Jim has been twirling around this [illegible] for was a pup. But the veteran never pitched better ball than at [illegible]

This will be the second time the Somerset Pals and the Ingals A. C. attempted to decide the first half championship of the Inter-Suburban League. They met last Tuesday evening, and the game ended in a [illegible] tie.

Because of the defeat of the strong Salem club, the Ingals A. C. will take the diamond a slight favorite over the Pals. The North Shore is all steamed up over tonight's affray, and the capacity of the park will be taxed.

Out in Dedham the good folk are all agog over tonight's duel between the Dedham A. A. and the Dedham Riversides. The town is split into two hostile camps. Fur and feathers will fly when the Ump bawls 'Play Bawl' this evening.

The James E. Hagan Club is throwing a scare into the supporters of the crack Malden and C. M. A. C. outfits, who thought the Boston Twilight League pie would be all their own cutting. The Hagans are playing some great ball and are making the race a three-cornered one.

Hagan Hurlers Able

Supporting Al Blanche, the Providence College pitching ace, the Hagans have two great twirlers in Elmer Munroe and Frank Blake, and two other capable twirlers in Pete Cerrone and Herb McKinnon. Ray Ahearn of New England League fame, and Gene Rappoli, Somerville High All Suburban catcher, are sharing the backstopping.

The Our Gang Comedy Baseball Team is after semipro games. All high school boys. Micky Surni, better known as Little Bob Fothergill, and Ernie Mars are the stars. Manager Joe Tecce can be reached at Lafayette 9873.

WALL STREET TO DROP FROM FRONT PAGES?

Crash Example of What Happens When Pace Is Forced

By B. C. FORBES

When stock speculation becomes so rampant that reports are being smashed day after day, and quotations are forecast sensationally as news, it is time for the front pages to report panicky scenes.

We have often been treated to both kinds of stories. Scores of them chronicled the unprecedented volume of buying at spectacularly-soaring prices, more recently crashes in stocks and commodities have featured the front pages.

The best thing that could happen would be substantial abatement of speculation and gyrations on the exchanges. A period of quiet business would be healthiest of all.

The writer cannot picture either the majority of stocks or commodities re-sinking to their early March depths which represented abject fear defeatism despair. But he does have recovered some degree of sanity some measure of hope, some faith in the future.

* * *

Washington is daily subjected to pressure to "push the party." Whereas the majority of men of affairs favor proceeding carefully, deliberately, a vast number of people are clamoring for drastic action day by day. This letter, from one reader, R. H. Rasapert, accurately reflects an attitude now very widespread:

"In your column you caution the President and his aides to be careful and cautious.

"American industry certainly needs it, and the clean-up can't be any too hasty and thorough. It must begin at the top and run on down through the entire system.

"It's about time American business stopped being an excuse for crookedness, racketeering and many other forms of corruptness and vileness."

* * *

Stocks and commodities have furnished a vivid, impressive example of what can happen when the pace is excessively forced. Even the best shares are far from immune when the debacle set in last week. And practically everything else which had attracted abnormal speculation was affected by the collapse.

Far healthier would it have been had the country experienced only moderate speculation, with an appreciated dizzy price advances declined to be suddenly turned into terrific declines.

Refrigerator Sales Set a High Record

Factory sales of household electric refrigerators made a new high record in June, although April or May usually was the peak of activity, says Louis Ruthenberg consultant to the refrigerator division of the National Electric Manufacturers Association.

Members of this group, representing about 80 per cent of the industry's total volume, report June sales to distributors and dealers of 278,550 units compared with 175,119 in May and 190,607 in June, 1932.

RAIL EARNINGS ARE IMPROVED

The first 12 railroads to report June earnings had net operating income which, in one night, their aggregate for the like 1932 month, but also showed a substantial increase over the corresponding month in 1931. The increase in net operating income over two years ago was registered despite a drop of almost 20 per cent in gross, a sizable decrease in gross over June, 1932, was reported as had been forecast by loadings reports. All carriers with one exception, reported increases in gross revenues and net operating income for June compared with the like 1932 month.

Net operating income of the roads made public for June exceeds approximated $11,769,000 against $10,750,000 in June, 1932, a betterment of 9.4 per cent.

Their net railway operating income in May this year aggregated $8,873,000, which was an increase of 1.32 per cent, and $18,149,000 paid out for May a year ago.

Gross revenues of the group in June this year amounting to about $48,054,000 against $41,158,000 in June, 1932, an increase of 16.7 per cent and $48,200,000 in June 1930, a reduction of 18%.

Gross in May this year approximated $48,150,000 an increase of 2.3 per cent over the $41,158,000 reported for the like 1932 month.

Bond Maturities For Coming Month Small

Total bond maturities for August amount to only $18,580,853, of which $7,771,553 are railroads $4,353,300 industrials and $6,245,000 public utilities. This compares with a total of $45,190,068 for July and $74,202,208 for August, 1932, according to Poor's Publishing Company.

August total this year is much smaller than for any month to date in 1933, due to the fact that there are no large maturing issues of any kind during the month.

There is no outstanding railroad issue maturing in August. Practically all of the issues outstanding represent equipment trusts of one kind or another.

Among the industrial maturities by Povis is $1,400,000 Graham-Paige Motors Corp. 6 per cent Sinking Fund Gold Debentures, Series "A," due Aug. 1. Practically all of the holders of this issue have

PRICE CHANGES FOR LEADERS ARE MIXED

New York, July 25—After rising 1 to more than 4 points, led by Allied Chemical and the liquor issues, leading shares on the New York Stock Exchange today ran into further selling and showed mixed price changes in the final hour.

Spotty rallying from the lows was in progress in late trading. Trading was quieter late in the session.

A good deal of the selling soon was attributed to traders looking for the customary secondary reaction." Shorts were timid, however, and disposed to cover commitments when signs of rallying set in.

Leading shares recorded advances of one to more than 4 points in the first hour of trading, stimulated by President Roosevelt's radio appeal to support his jobs program and by a further recovery in commodity markets.

Opening at noon for the second day of the shortened trading session, initial blocks ran to 10,000 shares in Radio.

Allied Chemical advanced around 4½ points and Case recovered 3 after its pronounced weakness of yesterday. Others up around 1 to 2 or more included American Telephone, Pennsylvania, Western Union, National Distillers, U. S. Industrial Alcohol, Celanese, American Can, Canada Dry and American Commercial Alcohol.

Auburn Auto ran up 3 points. Profit-taking was heavy along with forced selling from impaired marginal accounts, and served to hold the general market in check.

U. S. Governments showed narrow changes.

Many brokers were looking for a "secondary reaction" from the swift recovery that followed last week's break, pointing out that considerable stock purchased during the decline would undoubtedly be marketed.

Domestic trade developments continued to display progress. Railroad reports for June showed large gains in net operating income over June, 1932, while gross is also higher.

Condition statement of weekly reporting federal reserve member banks in 90 leading cities, showed an increase of $22,000,000 in loans and investments for the week ended July 19, a gain of $26,000,000 in time deposits, and $12,000,000 in reserve balances. Net demand deposits decreased $47,000,000.

Sales to 1 p. m. approximated 1,470,000 shares.

Through most of the second hour, stocks continued generally to show a strong tone, but toward the end of the period some irregularity was in evidence.

U. S. Steel moved over a narrow range, with traders disposed to wait for the report of the past quarter and dividend action on the preferred to be announced after the close of the market.

Numerous issues were unchanged. Homestake Mining sagged more than 4 points. At the same time, Air Reduction and Ingersoll Rand were up 3 or better. Gains of a point or more showed in Erie, Columbian Carbon and American Commercial Alcohol.

Closing on London Exchange Is Firm

London, July 25 (AP)—Prices on the stock exchange maintained their cheerfulness today. Investment issues, industrials and speculative shares improved generally on good buying while Argentine rails recovered one to two points. Transatlantic issues were quiet in the afternoon, maintaining their early gains. The market closed firm.

Paris and Berlin closed firm.

Sterling Pegging Denied in Commons

London, July 25 (INS)—The British Government has not yet tied the pound sterling to the French franc, virtually the only currency of a major power still on the gold standard. Leslie Hore-Belisha, financial secretary of the treasury, told the House of Commons today. He denied suggestions that the two currencies had already been pegged.

Boston Wool Mart Trade Less Active

Business in the wool market here was less active, though not slow enough to be called quiet. Some medium grades of wool were sufficiently scarce to limit offerings. Such lots were firmly held.

Wheat Is Higher in Chicago Market

Chicago, July 25 (AP)—Material upturns in wheat prices formed the rule early today. Active buying was largely based on reports indicating likelihood that the Canadian wheat crop had passed the limit where drouth relief was possible. Opening unchanged to 1½ cents higher, wheat afterward held near the initial quotations. Corn started at the same as yesterday's close, and subsequently kept unchanged.

Another Suspension on Board of Trade

Chicago, July 25—Announcement is made that under the provisions of Rle 119 Roscoe Rockwood and of Rule 119, Roscoe Rockwood and Co. of Bloomington, Ill., for which his membership is registered, have been suspended from all privileges of membership in the Chicago Board of Trade.

Rule 119 covers insolvency and provides for reinstatement of member upon settlement with creditors.

Cold Explanation Needed for Sale of Utility Bond

An interesting sidelight on the technicalities which must be taken into consideration when offering securities at the present time is provided by the issue of $5,944,000 Public Service Company of Indiana first mortgage and refunding 6 per cent gold bonds, series G. The bonds are being offered by Halsey, Stuart & Co. at 83 and interest to yield about 7 per cent.

The word "gold" is a part of the title of this issue. However, under a resolution of Congress securities are now payable in legal tender. It was necessary, therefore, for Halsey, Stuart & Co. to make the following explanation:

"The word 'gold' is a part of the title of these bonds and their terms expressly provide that they shall be payable, both as to principal and interest, in gold coin of the United States of America of the February 1, 1932 standard of weight and fineness.

"Public Resolution No. 10 of the 73rd Congress, approved on June 5, 1933, stipulates that 'every obligation heretofore or hereafter incurred, whether or not any such provision is contained or made with respect thereto, shall be discharged upon payment dollar for dollar in any coin or currency which at the time of payment is legal tender for public and private debts."

This is not an offering of new securities, it is stated by the bankers, the bonds representing the remainder of an offering initially made on March 23, 1932 plus Halsey, Stuart & Co.'s net accumulations to date. The average cost price is given as $800 for each $1000 bond.

SOVIET OFFERS BOND ISSUE

The first publicized public offering of Soviet government securities to American investors was revealed in a circular just sent out by the Soviet American Securities Corp.

The present offering, 10,000,000 rouble 7 per cent 10-year gold bonds, is the second offering in the past six months, but the first to be so announced, the original offering made last December having been sold entirely through the mails. This offering was also a 10,000,000 rouble gold bond issue, but bore 10 per cent interest. That issue, the underwriting house stated yesterday, has been entirely sold.

The bonds are a direct obligation of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, and a market for the bonds is guaranteed by the State Bank of the U. S. S. R.

The bonds are being offered in denominations of 100 gold roubles (a rouble having international gold value of 51.4 gold cents). The price of the bonds in dollars varies in accordance with the fluctuation of the American dollar on the world economic exchange markets.

The certificate of the State Bank of the Soviet, made a part of each bond, specifically provides for payments of principal and interest in dollars based on the value of the gold rouble, or in such other foreign currency as the holder may elect.

On demand of the holder, at any time after one year from date of purchase the bonds will be repurchased by the State Bank of U. S. S. R., at a par value of 100 gold rubles, plus accrued interest, thus guaranteeing a market.

The present issue was first offered on July 1, last, but became known of only yesterday. The offering, therefore, is exempt from the provisions of the Securities Act, but in contrast to many sch circulars, the notice declares that "statement made herein are guaranteed correct and full responsibility for them is accepted."

The offering house, Soviet American Securities Corporation, yesterday stated itself to be an American Corporation, merely underwriting the issue, not being Soviet agents.

Commodity Prices Index Off 5 Points

Wholesale commodity prices during the latest week declined five points, principally because of lower prices for cotton, wheat, corn, flour and several other important commodities, according to the National Fertilizer Association index.

The latest index number is 67.3, which compares with 67.8 for the preceding week, 62.7 for a month ago and 61.1 a year ago.

During the preceding week the index gained 24 points. The latest number is 19 points higher than it was two weeks ago, 46 points higher than it was a month ago and exceeds a year ago at this time by 62 points.

Return Expected From Expenditure on Public Works

Washington, July 25 (US)—The federal government's expectation of an eventual large financial return on its $3,300,000,000 public works investment in prosperity, rests on interest on 70 per cent of the cost of non-federal projects, to be paid by states, counties and municipalities for use of this money.

Under the National Recovery Act the federal government may make an outright grant of 30 per cent of the total cost of labor and material for any approved state or municipal project. The additional 70 per cent will be met by the state or municipality, which may be obtained in whole or part from the federal fund in the form of a loan bearing 4 per cent.

In order to take advantage of federal aid, states and municipalities must put their house in order. They will have to satisfy the public works administration of their financial stability, furnish good security, and show that the project will be self liquidating.

The public works administration also is prepared to make loans for legitimate private building enterprises but the federal government will make no outright contribution. Money advanced for private construction will have to be repaid in full and at a rate of interest higher than 4 per cent charged states and municipalities.

Only the most worth while building construction under this category will be considered. The taxpayers' money will not be poured down "any one's private rat hole," Secretary of the Interior Ickes, public works administrator, announced.

Garment Workers Get Wage Increase

Cincinnati, July 25 (AP)—Wages have been increased 20 per cent by members of the Union-Made Garment Manufacturers Association of America, Benjamin Berman, chairman of the legislative and fair trade practice committee, announced today.

More than 8000 workers benefited from the increase, which became effective July 17, he said. The leading manufacturers of overalls are represented in the association.

Freight Rates for Potatoes Are Upheld

Washington July 25 (INS)—Freight rates on potatoes in carloads, from points on the Bangor & Aroostook Railroad in Maine to Searsport, Me., for coastwise shipment, are not unreasonable or otherwise unlawful, the Interstate Commerce Commission held today.

Loan to Waltham by First National

Waltham has sold a $200,000 loan to the First National Bank of Boston at 5 per cent discount, the loan being due December 1. Some of the money will be used to pay off the $123,000 in short term notes which the city owes and is due, and part will be used to pay off the $30,000 which Waltham owes to various trades people.

First Lady Will Also Give Radio Talk This Evening

"The Radio Roosevelts" they'll be calling them soon. The President follows his last night's address with another tonight; Mrs. Roosevelt broadcasts tonight; and, as usual, James, eldest son, takes his weekly WNAC turn tomorrow evening. But the more often they broadcast, the better listeners like it for each one of the family always has something of importance to say.

The Chief Executive will address the conference of governors in San Francisco, and WNAC and WEEI carry the broadcast at midnight.

Earlier in the evening, at 9 o'clock, Mrs. Roosevelt speaks before the Chautauqua Institution at Lake Chautauqua, N. Y., and WBZ will be the local outlet. The First Lady has selected as her topic "The New Responsibilities of Women."

Not only is it Radio Night for the immediate family but for the official family as well. Chief of the Recovery Staff Gen. Hugh Johnson reports latest developments in the Industrial Control center in an address over WEEI at 10:30 tonight.

Donald Richberg, general counsel to the Recovery Administration, speaks on "Progress of the National Recovery Act" through WNAC at 8:15.

Bing Crosby contributes a couple of tunes to the California Melodies program, WAAB at 10 tonight.

Networks haven't made any announcement yet, but we wouldn't be surprised if the official N. Y. welcome to Wiley Post tomorrow will be aired.

The question "Where does your lap go when you stand up?" is being succeeded by the query "Where do sponsors go in the summer?" . . . The summer radio slump is on for fair, or maybe for unfair . . . But even Fu Manchu, the Octopus and the Shadow, radio terrorists, are overcome with fear and have left the air . . . Announcers are being slithered down to nothing and those left are making meals by eating their words. Half of the radio comedians have departed leaving the radio humor situation half witted . . . Air moguls thought beer makers would save 'em. But trouble brews and radio men foam at the mouth as beer manufacturers say "no" to sponsoring programs. And radioers plead in song "Drink to Me Only With Thine Ayes."

Even Uncle Sam Pays Off in Bogus Cash These Days

Martin F. McDonough, assistant postmaster at Melrose Highlands, thinks it's pretty tough when postal clerks, in the face of the cuts they have received, find thmeselves paid in counterfeit money, but that's what happened to McDonough.

Walter Leavitt discovered a counterfeit $10 bill in the deposit, called it to McDonough's attention, and McDonough declared, whether counterfeit or not, Postmaster General Farley's branch of the government had sent it along to him for recompense for labor rendered.

He took his pay envelope, unopened, to the Stoneham Trust Co., where he made a deposit. Teller

"Let's Look at the Records"

OPEN LETTER TO ATTORNEY GENERAL JOSEPH E WARNER:

As chief of the State's legal department and advisor to the forthcoming legislative investigation of crime and the police department of Boston you will doubtless require in your work the records of the real racket kings of Boston.

Governor Ely was not successful in getting from the police department the names of the real leaders of the underworld. The list he got was composed mostly of small fry and petty offenders.

To help you in your investigation the Boston Evening American will present for your study each day the record of a man whose name stands high up in the list of public enemies and whose name has been withheld from the governor by the police department.

NUMBER 7

Without any notice to the police, or any particular reason, this man has switched from crime in general to operating a successful speakeasy, and at the same time has a controlling interest in a wholesale alcohol plant.

For 10 years previous to his entering this field, he had engaged in every known criminal offense from larceny as a youth through breaking and entering jobs, stickups, hijacking and strongarm chiseling, to muscling in on big-time liquor operators.

The only type of crimes he abjured were crimes involving women and murder. He was present, however, when more than one murder was committed. And on one occasion he knocked the gun from the hand of a companion after the latter had shot a rival.

His record, Mr. Warner, was not revealed by Police Commissioner Hultman's Public Enemy List, though the records of the police department could show no less than 50 crimes that he was involved in. He walks the streets of Boston today—when he walks—with the air of a youthful businessman. When he rides in his automobile, which by the way has been punctured by lead more than once, he has a rod-man as his chauffeur.

On his record, three short sentences may be found. Not one major felony has been "pinned on him" in the courts.

Tomorrow, Mr. Warner, the record of another notorious character—who was not on the police public enemy list—will be portrayed.

Daily True Story

Success Girl

In the soft, romantically lighted foyer of the great Axis Theater the tall, brown-haired young man in cadet's uniform stood stiff as a ramrod. At appropriate intervals he announced that there were seats two aisles to the right.

"Norman!" a voice suddenly exclaimed, as two figures paused beside him. The speaker was a pretty blonde, smartly dressed.

"Norman, what are you doing here?" she cried. "Is this the theatrical work you are doing in New York?"

Her outburst spoiled his attitude of military grandeur. He took a step forward, his face lighting eagerly, and was about to speak when he spied a manager approaching. He congealed again.

SURPRISE FOR GWEN

It was well after midnight when a taxi set Gwen Talbot down in front of Feroli's restaurant in "the village." As she entered the tall, brown-haired young man rose from a table near the door.

"I can't stay very long," she informed him. "Mrs. Whiting is stopping by for me in half an hour. I wanted time to—to talk to you alone."

He nodded, scanning her face intently, and asked:

"Mrs. Whiting? Is that the haughty dame you were with at the theater?"

"Yes," said Gwen, her blue eyes flashing, "and I wish you wouldn't speak of her in that way. Mrs. Whiting is prominent socially and I've been a guest in her home since I came here. She's introducing me to lots of important and interesting people."

"I see," said Norman, thoughtfully.

"And, Norman," the girl continued, "why didn't you tell me the truth about your position here? Your deception, as you saw, placed me in an embarrassing position tonight before Mrs. Whiting."

POKER FACE.

There was a note of appeal in his voice, but the girl ignored it. Her blue eyes met his coldly.

Norman's expression changed to a poker face.

"Well, I suppose we may as well call it all off," he said. "Just another vacation engagement that didn't take. Another error of our youth, eh, Gwen?"

"I suppose so," she agreed.

"And I was true to you, Cynara—in my best fashion," he murmured, watching her go.

A month later Gwen Talbot was still in New York, but living in a furnished room, instead of Mrs. Whiting's home. That lady's friendship had proved capricious and Gwen's brief dip into society was ended. Her money had run low also and she had to take a job in an office.

She was delighted when a fellow employe, receiving tickets from a friend suddenly called out of town, invited her to the opening of a new play.

They arrived late, barely in time to read the title on the program. Gwen started in surprise. It was "The Usher and the Lady."

She was even more surprised when the curtain rose. It disclosed a dim, romantically lighted movie foyer and a tall, brown-haired young man standing stiff as a ramrod. A group of patrons passed him and he launched his opening line: "Seats two aisles to the right."

The play dealt with the usher, a Park ave. beauty, who made a play for him and appeared too "fast"—but wasn't—and a dancer who at first seemed more of a lady than the Park ave. girl—but wasn't. It moved swiftly, cleverly against a background of the theatre, a penthouse overlooking Central Park and an underworld cabaret.

"Wouldn't you like to meet him,

Despondent Bank Teller Ends Life

Brunswick, Me., July 25—Despondency over the merger of the local branch of the Fidelity Trust Company with the national bank here led Herman L. Stover, teller of the former institution, to commit suicide here yesterday, it was learned today.

He is survived by his widow, one son and a brother. Funeral plans will be completed today.

97 GIRLS ENTER SWIM MEET

Through courtesy of Tom Meehan, manager of R. K. O. Keith's, the 30 girls who win prizes in the Boston American-Sunday Advertiser annual swimming meet next Saturday afternoon at Columbus Park beach, South Boston, will be guests at the theatre that night.

"Nothing will be too good for the girls who win Saturday," said Mr. Meehan, "and so I will place the state box at their disposal. It will be a real pleasure to have them as our guests."

Mr. Meehan will introduce the winners to the audience.

A total of 97 girls from all parts of New England have entered. Entries closed yesterday. Each girl was limited to two events.

One set of twins, another pair of sisters and three sisters in still another family are among those who will compete.

The twins are Alice and Marguerite Bridges, 19, of Whitin Community Association, Whitinsville. Both girls are outstanding swimmers. Experts concede that Alice, who is the foremost freestyle swimmer in New England, will win the New England half-mile championship, which is one of the big features. She is entered also in the 100 meters backstroke event.

Language of Flowers

NOTE—Today we offer another tender passage from Hill's Manual of Social Forms, 1888. We hope our readers will enjoy many moments of rapture by revival of this coy Victorian code.

VERY charming method of communicating thought is by the aid of flowers, their language and sentiment being understood by the parties who present them. An extended correspondence may be carried on by the presentation of bouquets, single flowers and even leaves; the charm of this interchange of thought largely consisting in the romance attendant upon an expression of sentiment in a partially disguised and hidden language.

Illustrations.

A declaration of feeling between lady and gent may be expressed by single flowers, as follows:

The gentleman presents a Red Rose—"I love you." The lady admits a partial reciprocation by returning a Purple Pansy—"You occupy my thoughts." The gentleman presses his suit still further by an Everlasting Pea—"Wilt thou go with me?" The lady by a Daisy, in which she says—"I will think of it." The gentleman, in his enthusiasm, plucks and presents a Shepherd's Purse—"I offer you my all." The lady, doubtingly, returns a sprig of Laurel—"Words, though sweet, may deceive."

Language of the Bouquet.

A bouquet may mean very much. Thus a Rose, Ivy and Myrtle will signify "Beauty, Friendship and Love." A Bachelor's Button and a Red Rose will indicate that "I hope to obtain your love."

"I Desire to Marry You."
Jonquil—Linden.
"I Have Sweet Memories in My Solitude."
Periwinkle—Heath.
"Think of me in my Absence
White Verbana—Wormwood

Thus sentences may be readily expressed by flower language and by nosegay a change of definition may be given the more common blossoms and plants whereby the language and correspondence may be conducted without inconvenience.

* * *

—"The boxing racket is in a bad way," says Genevieve, the kitchen cynic. "None of the heavyweight s a will fight for the customers, and none of the customers will fight for $50 seats."

STADIUM STUDY

Before next Fall,
There may be no college
Football at all.
The times are so tough, so
Say soothsayers,
That they ain't got no dough
To hire the players.

John Wright.

NEW ENGLAND'S GREATEST EVENING NEWSPAPER

BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN

TUESDAY, JULY 25, 1933

LARGEST EVENING CIRCULATION BY MORE THAN 75,000

Politicians and Fixers Versus the People

GOVERNOR ELY has won from a reluctant Legislature the authority to appoint a commission that will investigate the causes and responsibility for the abominable wave of banditry, racketeering and general crime.

Why the Legislature should have hesitated for an instant to grant him such authority is a mystery that probably would not stand the light of day.

The assumption rests that the Legislature was influenced by the combination of underworld chieftains and political fixers who derive their fat and unconscionable profits from the traffic of the underworld minions they command.

In any event, Governor Ely is now possessed of the authority which he courageously sought and we now expect him to give the public a commission in whose integrity, ability and independence the public will have complete confidence.

THE crime situation in Massachusetts has produced, as one of its evil by-products, a cowardly regime of buck-passing and artful dodging among the police, the district attorneys and the courts of this Commonwealth.

It is the solemn opinion of the Boston Evening American that all of these elements are responsible for the ominous failure to clean up the underworld and that all their dodging will not enable them to evade their responsibility in the public sentiment.

The police of Boston are palpably guilty for their failure to drive the underworld criminals into the open and to destroy their reign of banditry.

The district attorneys are responsible in many cases for the hesitancy with which they have proceeded against these brutal and dangerous public enemies.

The courts have been negligent and timorous, else you would not see desperate criminals arrested from twenty to fifty times and promptly released to prey upon the life and property of law-abiding citizens.

* * *

GOVERNOR ELY should name a commission so free from political influence that it will go to the roots of these nefarious conditions and expose them with courage and impartiality.

Who runs the police department of Boston?

Who are the inside fixers that act as the liaison between the underworld racketeers and the police and the courts?

Who are the underworld chiefs that operate the vice and gambling dens and who finance the underworld minions in their depredations upon the public?

Why do these criminals escape apprehension by the police and conviction in the courts?

These are a few things that decent people want to know in order that the wave of criminal terrorism can be abolished.

These are the things that can be exposed if Governor Ely names an independent commission willing to go the full distance in the war upon crime and racketeering.

Blind Bank Statements

Depositors Kept in the Dark

If you have money in a bank you will be interested in this letter from a reader:

"The Boston Evening American, throughout the great crisis, has been so helpful to the depositors of both the solvent and the closed banks that I wonder what new ideas you have to strengthen their condition. What do you think of the bank statements?"

The average bank statement is a complex mass of figures, understandable only to their authors. They are condensed, of course, in order to crowd them into the briefest possible space. The average man could read these statements from morning until night and he would have about as much information as when he started.

The bankers have begun to realize this confusion. President Nichols of the First National Bank of Englewood, at Chicago, said in a recent statement:

"Honesty, good banking and common sense require no secrecy. A bank that cannot make a clearly defined, detailed statement, telling you exactly where every dollar of your money has been invested, does not merit your confidence."

The Corn Exchange Bank Trust Company in New York now shows in its regular statement the percentage of each asset to the total assets, thus telling the diversification of its investments. Continental Bank and Trust Company of New York names its liquid assets and shows their relation to the total of deposits. We are informed that certain Boston banks will adopt such a policy of explanation.

As this system expands—the system of detailing the assets and liabilities of the bank for information of the depositors—the whole structure of banking will command the unlimited support of the depositors. It is their money, anyway, and they should know.

Helping Home Owners

Mr. Cotter's Great Opportunity

Charles F. Cotter has been appointed Massachusetts director of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation and upon him devolves a great responsibility as well as a high honor.

The purpose of this government corporation which Mr. Cotter will now direct in this State is to save the homes of the unfortunate people who have been sorely wounded in the economic struggles of the past three years.

This Corporation will take over the mortgages of the harassed home-owners. It will give them lower rates of interest. It will grant them additional loans, both to improve their property and to pay their taxes. It will afford them lenient conditions of repayment.

The intention of this law to bring relief to persons who bear serious burdens is a noble intention. Like all good laws, however, the success of its purpose will depend very largely upon the policy of its administration.

Mr. Cotter is an able man and is a sympathetic man. If he will administer the law with the leniency and understanding that are essential he will win for himself the esteem and affection of the unfortunate people who have despaired of keeping their little homes intact. He is to be wished success in his new venture because upon his success depends the happiness and contentment of many of our people.

'The Man, Not the Wine'

The argument ended abruptly when one declared:

There was no ready answer to that.

Most men are taught they are put into this world with a free will. The one who is surrounded by the greatest temptations and avoids or overcomes them is supposed to derive the highest eternal reward hereafter.

Pickets Have Rights

The Boston Central Labor Union is investigating a Judge who is said to have remarked:

"Pickets in all strikes should be jailed, and would be if I had my way."

The picket is sometimes a nuisance. But not always. Anyway, he has his rights under the law and these rights must be respected.

We hear a good deal of talk about the sanctity of the law. This talk comes very often from Judges unwilling to take the law as they find it but eager to accept the law as it satisfies their personal prejudices.

False Foundation Stones -:- By Nelson Harding

Restless cubes that roll and rattle,

A Popular Captain

O. O. McIntyre

Among his intimates are that other sea-faring scribbler, William McFee, and Christopher Morley, the essayist. Captain Bone is the author of several sea tales and does most of his writing in his cabin during his leisure moments crossing the Atlantic.

His library of ocean volumes includes all Joseph Conrad first editions. He is the marine maverick of a extremely artistic family. His brother, Muirhead Bone, is a famous etcher, his daughter a wood cut artist of some distinction and another, brother is an editor of the Manchester Guardian.

Like William McFee, Captain Bone does not have to write for a living. Rather does he write for sheer fun of it. When he comes to town he is usually found the center of a group at The Players. Sometimes he barges into the Algonquin with his rolling gait, where he's also a favorite yarn spinner.

I did not know until the other day that the father of Peggy Wood, the actress, was Eugene Wood so goodly known in the early 1900's for his "Back Home" stories. He wrote of the cross-roads with a skill few remembering-when writers achieved. I recall one particular tour de force dealing with the never ending and hopeless struggle of the average home dweller with a hot air furnace. Literally the agonies of the travail made perspiration pop. Wood was one writer who wore a full beard.

Benny Rubin spending the night at Great Neck with a comedian friend, had to race with him next morning for a train to town. Rubin gaspingly inquired if he always had to rush that way. "It's 50-50," he replied. "Sometimes I'm at the station when the train comes puffing in and sometimes the train is at the station when I come puffing in."

One of the welcome casual droppers-in is the Sage of North Conchoton, Roscoe Peacock, here a few moments today. Peacock is among the last of the "Old Subscribers" who write letters to newspaper editors about all matters of current interest. A wiry, bright-eyed, nimble-minded and extensively traveled gentleman, he has a passion for accuracy. It has taken ten years for him to make newspapers conscious that "gilding the lily" should be "painting the lily."

Lincoln McVeagh, recently appointed minister to Greece, is known in New York social circles as one of the most graceful dancers in the smarter places. Oddly enough, at Harvard he was celebrated for reading Greek elegiacs on the subway to Boston. Bent over his text books, he would measure off the spondees and dactyles to the clicking of the wheels. And now he is going to Greece!

On an upper reach of Riverside Drive at 165th street has stood in the sunshine, wind and rain for 30 years a photographer with camera and tripod. Burned black he is a lonely figure against the sky. His name is E. A. Jacobs and he has snap-shotted celebrities from Marshal Foch to the more recent Max Baer. Perhaps in all New York no one's business is so isolated. On his side of the roadway is no sidewalk and his background i the lawn of a deaf institute. Yet he has made a good living salvaging customers out of the motor flow, although he never solicits. Even Peggy Joyce once stopped. His home is bought and paid for.

In Bob Davis' magazine mail nine years ago came, a neatly typed tale, "The Luck of Roaring Camp. Returning the mss. he courteously explained: "I solemnly promised Bert Harte on his death-bed I'd never take one of his stories except from him." He opposed, of course, that would close the incident, but back came a postcard answer: "You was a dern fool ever to make such a promise." A laboratory specimen for analysis who try to explain what humor is!

Weird Story From Brittany of King of Sunken City of Ys and His Galloping Horse

By Edwin C. Hill

That's a strange story, a weird story, that comes to us from Brittany, in France. Breton fishermen of the Baie des Trepasse—the Bay of the Dead—have heard, night after night, as they made their way from their fishing boats, along lonely dark lanes, to their thatched cottages of stone, the oncoming pound of the iron-shod feet of a galloping horse. Pausing in the darkness by the wayside hedges, holding their breath, they have heard the clatter of hoofs of a hard-ridden horse come nearer and nearer, heard the horse gallop past them in a rush of sound, heard the high, terrified scream of a woman, heard the rapidly diminishing pounding of hoofs lost in the silences of the night. But they have caught never a glimpse of horse or rider—not one.

And they have gone with this eerie tale to the good fathers of the church, who have counselled them to beware of the artifices of the Evil One, but to burn a candle, if they will, for the salvation of the soul of the Princess Dahut of the lost City of Ys—the city which lies on the the bottom of the Bay of the Dead.

It is a curious fact that a living horse and a living rider fled in desperate haste along that Breton road on a night in the long ago—fifteen hundred years ago. And a wicked woman screamed as she was hurled to death by her own father. And the tale of it (which the good fathers well know) is this.

The City of Ys was a magnificent city filled with luxury and vice. It was built of marble and Breton stone upon a wide plain, below the level of the sea. Great walls and dykes surrounded it to keep out the restless sea. Gradlon, its king, was a good man and a Christian man, but he had a daughter who was as bad as she was beautiful, the Princess Dahut. She dwelt in a lofty tower of Ys, and in her tower she held revels with a succession of lovers. When tired of one, she had him thrown into a well, and turned to another.

The last of her lovers, a handsome, foolish fellow, persuaded her to steal from her sleeping father, Kingy Gradlon, the silver key which locked the great sluice gates in the walls which held out the sea. In idle folly they opened the gates and the sea rushed in. A voice in the night roused Gradlon from sleep and bade him fly for his life. On the back of his warhorse, holding in his arms the wicked daughter that he loved, he rode through drowning streets to the open country.

But the sea followed them fast and rose to the horse's shoulders, and a voice commanded Gradlon to cast away the demon he held in his arms. Obeying the voice he hurled his daughter, the Princess Dahut, into the rising tide, and spurred on, as her death shriek rose above the waters. At that moment the waters paused and receded and Gradlon rode on to safety, and to found the Breton city which is now called Quimper.

If you should go to Audierne in Brittany today, to that grim and rocky coast by the Bay of the Dead, you will always see two black crows together. The Breton peasants, crossing themselves, will tell you that the two black crows are the souls of the Princess and her lover. At Troquer you would see, on the shore, great, hewn blocks of stone which were once part of the palaces of Ys, and beneath the water, at low tide, the foundations of the walls and of the palaces of this lost and drowned city.

And you might hear—who knows?—the trampling of Gradlon's horse in the night and glimpse the pale, lost souls hovering on the shore of the Bay of the Dead—drowned souls awaiting their passage across the bay.

Just Folks

Starting From Here

Who cries: "We're starting over!" I remember long ago
A score of treasured friendships that we hadn't come to know.
Though we were young and hopeful when our fight for fame began,

Proud possessors still of treasures we have gathered on the way.
It is true we've lost some money, but we will not have it told

If he looks his long life over and discovers nothing left.

We have countless happy memories we can cherish to the last.
We are older, yes, and wiser in the lore of peace and pain,
And with all the years have taught us we can go to work again.
